'PALMY DAYS' AGAIN IN SUNNY FLORIDA Southward Trek of Society's Sun-Chasers Livens Beaches With 'Befo de Crash' Gaiety

Against a background of palm-fringed beaches, Florida is witnessing Powell Pendley of Atlanta (front), a revival of resort activity unequalled since pre-depression days. The asterners, Otto H. Kahn, New York banker, golf club in hand; Mrs. E. sands are crowded with sun-bathers, the two shown in the foreground here Edgerton Warburton of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Harold Vanderbilt of New York.

PALM BEACH.—(AP)—Florida's palm-shaded beaches are bustling with feasts of society, theatrical and sporting celebrities to a degree they haven't enjoyed since "befo de crash." Standing out in the news here have been the Primo-Carnera-Tommy Loughran heavyweight championship fight and the artists' and writers' gold tournament, but there are hundreds of other smaller affairs and parties which lured an early overflow of famous folk southward. Scores of magnificent homes which have been closed in recent seasons have once again been opened by wealthy winter vacationers, and the days and nights are filled with rounds of tea, dances, bridge parties, fishing expeditions and similar festivities. One of the aristocratic aspects of the winter colonies is the arrival of numerous foreign dignitaries from the embassies at Washington. Even the exciting state of world diplomatic situations has not prevented ambassadors and attaches from spending south for brief vacations in neighborhoods of the Everglades. Florida has always been especially popular with the British and French diplomatic sets.
