"Devil Tiger" Opens Today

An artist's conception of the turbulent menace to be found in the Asiatic jungle, and shown in "Devil Tiger," playing at the Craterian theater for three days, starting today. Filmed entirely in the jungles, under the direction of Clyde E. Elliott, director of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," this latest thriller has sights and sounds recorded for the first time for the motion picture screen.

"I Am Suzanne" at Rialto

Lilian Harvey's latest "I Am Suzanne," a sprightly, unique film story of a stage star who falls in love with a youth, the representative of a declining family of puppeteers, plays at the Rialto theater today and Monday. Combining the elements of tender love with elements of spectacle and richness, "I Am Suzanne" also brings poverty onto the screen in which a group of puppets play an important part. There are three new song numbers—"St. Moritz Waltz," "Just a Little Garret" and "Eskimo-lay-lay-lay," besides dancing numbers brought

Now at Studio

"The pun," declares Ed Wynn, who comes to the Studio theater today in "The Chief," "is the highest form of humor, not the lowest. There is nothing harder to write and there is nothing more humorous than a really brilliant pun. Personally I love 'em. There is something about a pun that tickles my sense of humor."

Into the picture in the revue sequences. Gene Raymond, Leslie Banks and the Pedrecca's Piccoli Marionettes have the featured supporting parts.

Chevalier in "Way To Love" at Roxy

Set against a background of the roof-top dwellings, the small, carnivals and musical halls of the left bank of Paris, Maurice Chevalier in "The Way to Love," which starts today at the Roxy theater.

That part of Parisian life which offers Maurice the more simpler, more human "down-to-earth" roles he so earnestly desires presents the singing French star as a guide for a tourist agency. His job, showing the "beauties" of Paris, leads him into a romance with one beauty who isn't to be seen from the top of a sight-seeing bus. Ann Dvorak has the role.
