

MILK INDUSTRY NEGLECTING USE OF ADVERTISING

By C. W. AUSTIN
City Milk Inspector.

Since the stone age, the lot of man and cattle has linked closely. They have crossed plains, mountains, deserts and seas, and old "Boozy" has ever done her share in serving man and the raising of his children.

Perhaps this is the logical place to take the precaution of the good person in announcing his subject, to aid, not only the dairy industry as a whole, but the entire community of Jackson county.

Emphasis was given the idea of how to produce and distribute dairy products better, instead of producing more. Applying this especially to market milk, it was shown that great little or no profit. Economic conditions have made dairying attractive, compared to other lines of farming, because it spelled cash. Beef has been low, and this has caused many dairymen to keep heifers, allowing them to freshen at a very early age, thus adding to surpluses. He is thinking in terms of more, instead of better.

Unemployment has entered the situation, as in all lines, lessening buying power, and together with the consumer, they have both become inculcated with the thought of getting more, in place of getting better.

The milk distributor has played his part in this surplus picture. He goes out imbued with the idea of getting more customers—any old way, instead of better ones, spending little or no time in instructively inducing users of more milk by good paying customers.

Both he and the producer are often blinded by this imaginary thought of getting more in place of better, and they sell milk and cream, and buy so-called substitutes, thus stealing their own grain from their own cows, and then bawling louder than the herd.

The middle man speculators and storekeepers step into this surplus picture, they glimpse the handwriting on the wall, which spells further surpluses in dairy products, and they naturally delay buying, expecting further drop, when they, too, may get more for less.

The consumer can't be omitted and still have a finished surplus picture. In his thought of getting more for less, he loses sight of many facts for lack of knowledge, and frequent reminders.

It's not alone what we pay, but it's what we get for what we pay, that determines value.

One can purchase a quart of milk and a loaf of bread (Hello, Heine, and the two Bills) and have a quite sustaining meal.

So many illustrations point the difficulties, but like the man in jail, after he is there, the main thought is to get out.

Another point stressed at the short course, was that the dairy industry had seemed to think their product would always be considered a staple and needed no special advertising. They seemed to think they can't afford it, even right in the face of phenomenal successes showing exactly the reverse in thousands of newspapers and by original methods. Proper advertising is not an expense—it's an investment, and can be so proven right here in Medford.

Here is an old adage—"He who hollers down the well about the goods he has to sell, will never reach the shining dollars, like he who climbs a tree and hollers."

The human stomach's capacity is limited—all sorts of foods and drinks. Some camouflaged and propagandized are insistently hollering from treatises, newspapers, radios, etc., for recognition, while milk, which is "unimpaired," sits sleepily by, gurgling its combined superiority over all down the sewer of surplus to oblivion.

HIGH COURT RULE ON MILK CONTROL PLEASES OREGON

SALEM, March 6.—(AP)—Gratification over the decision of the United States supreme court in sustaining the price fixing provision of the New York milk control act was expressed here today by John D. Mickie, chief of the foods and dairies bureau of the state department of agriculture, in which is vested administration of the recently enacted Oregon milk control act.

"In its provisions, especially those relative to fixing minimum prices, the Oregon act follows those of the New York act closely," said Mickie, "and such a decision by the federal supreme court goes a long way toward clearing up difficulties we have met in administering the act here, paving the way to its successful operation."

Mickie said Oregon authorities had anticipated that the legal questions of the right of the state to fix minimum prices and to exercise control over milk shipped in from other states in interstate traffic would be raised before this, but that the decision of the federal court had disposed of the more important question. He explained that control over interstate shipments is of lesser importance here, because of reciprocal agreements worked with the state of Washington.

PEPCO ON BRINK OF BANKRUPTCY, RECEIVER NAMED

PORTLAND, Ore., March 6.—(AP) Contending that the Portland Electric Power company is in danger of insolvency, as evidenced by default of $480,000 in interest due March 1 on $16,000,000 in outstanding debentures, Percy H. Clark of Philadelphia today successfully petitioned for appointment of Frank T. Griffith, president of the company, as its receiver.

Griffith said "the purpose of the receiver, subject to approval of the court, will be to proceed with the reorganization of the debenture, now under way, and to maintain the properties as going concerns so as to protect the interests of the creditors and stockholders."

Alfred A. Hampson, attorney for Clark, advised the court that Griffith had agreed to serve as receiver without compensation, and that the petitioner was eager to have Griffith appointed because of his 40 years of experience in the business, and of his efforts to protect the stockholders and creditors.

Clark's petition asked the federal court to order a receivership until such time as the bankruptcy act amendment pending in congress is passed. It is designed to aid corporations unable to reorganize finances.

OLDEST PIONEER WOMAN WILL BE JUBILEE'S QUEEN

Efforts are being continued to determine the oldest pioneer woman in Oregon who will reign over Oregon's Diamond Jubilee celebration in Medford, next June 3 to 9, celebrating Oregon's seventy-fifth birthday. The selection of the pioneer will be carried on in co-operation with civic, county, and state organizations to render assurance that honors will be bestowed on the right person.

A number of names have been submitted and will be given consideration, along with numerous others expected from different sections of the state. The pioneer selected will be queen mother of Oregon during the celebration, ruling a court composed of princesses representing each of the 36 counties in the state. The princesses all are to be selected independently by each county, invited by the jubilee committee to actively participate in the week's festivities. There is a possibility that the princesses will either be young women or the oldest able-bodied pioneer in each county.

GEHLHAR'S DAIRY PROGRAM GIVEN GRANGE BACKING

A resolution, upholding Max Gehlhar, director of agriculture in his dairy program to protect the producer, and charging that distributors and manufacturers of dairy products are bringing pressure to bear upon Gehlhar to increase the differential of dairy products to the consumer, was passed by the Phoenix Grange at its last meeting and will be brought before the Pomona Grange of Jackson county this coming Saturday.

The grange members maintain in the resolution that one cent per pound spread for the manufacturers is adequate and that one cent per pound spread to the retailers, instead of 2 cents, is also just and equitable.

The resolution, bearing the Grange seal, is addressed to Mr. Gehlhar, and reads:

"Whereas, the dairy industry is one of the leading industries of the state of Oregon and constituting one-fifth of the income of the state of Oregon;

"Whereas, Mr. Gehlhar, the director of agriculture of the state of Oregon, is doing all that is in his power to put dairy products, produced in Oregon, to the consumers at a reasonable differential to the distributors and manufacturers of dairy products;

"Whereas, the distributors and manufacturers of dairy products are bringing pressure to bear upon Mr. Gehlhar to increase the differential of dairy products to the consumers, taking it away from the producers of dairy products to the amount of a quarter of a million dollars;

"Whereas, the Phoenix Grange, a subordinate of the Oregon State Grange, do resolve to stand back of Mr. Gehlhar, the director of agriculture of the state of Oregon, and do give him our hearty support and back him to the limit in what he is trying to do for the dairy producers of Oregon; be it further:

"Resolved, that the Phoenix Grange does hereby express itself in this resolution stating that we agree with the director's marketing order of January 18, 1934, and further agree that 1 cent per pound spread for the manufacturers instead of 2 cents and that 1 cent per pound spread to the retailers instead of 2 cents per pound is just and equitable."

The reply of the state of Oregon in the appeal to the state supreme court of L. A. Banks, local agitator, now serving life in state prison for second degree murder, is now in the hands of the state printer. March 10 is the final date for the filing of the reply. The defense brief was filed a month ago.

Attorney L. A. Liljequist, named by the state attorney general to act because of the illness of Assistant Attorney General Ralph E. Moody, was here Saturday checking over the brief.
