The J. C. Penney Company Present Their FOLLIES OF 1933

A gradual accumulation of merchandise that didn't sell... (Why, heaven only knows)... but with such an all-star cast of values that you'll applaud with every dime you can get together. We feature those two famous artists Frank and Earnest. We will play the dual role by being brutally frank and decidedly earnest. We are going to ring down the curtain on these all-star numbers, we're headed for the last Round-Up. We trust that you will sing the praises of these wonderful values accompanied by the music of the cash register. What a symphony! Don't expect encores, for when the last number is gone, let us quote Ethel Barrymore, "That's all there is, there isn't any more." Be here when the curtain rises.

8:30 A. M. TOMORROW!
