MAX BAER ACTS AND FIGHTS AT STUDIO

"The Prizefighter and the Lady," now on view at the Studio theater, is the kind of a picture reviewers like to review.

First, because the story is like everything else in the picture, of championship stuff. Second, because the director, W. S. Van Dyke, was exactly the right man to have been handed the megaphone. And third, because the cast is incomparable.

It is no longer news that Myrna Loy has turned out to be one of the most interesting and charming of the cinema's feminine stars and in her current role of a night club singer she again more than proves her worth. As for Max Baer, this challenger for the heavyweight championship of the world is as excellent an actor as he is a fighter. In the new film he does both and sets a new high for ardent, romantic love-making.

Coming Sunday

A good part of the comedy in "Fashions of 1934" coming Sunday to the Craterian theater, is supplied by Frank McHugh.

ZANE GREY WESTERN AT ROXS SATURDAY

Packed with thrills, romance, death and danger, Zane Grey's "The Thundering Herd" comes to the Roxy theater tomorrow.

Randolph Scott, Judith Allen, Monte Blue, Harry Carey, Noah Beery, Buster Crabbe, Raymond Hatton and Blanche Friderici head the all-star cast.

They bring back the era when men and women risked their lives in pursuit of the fortunes to be shot out of the great buffalo herds that roamed the plains.

And the modern camera brings to life once more the booming stampedes of blison which swept all before them trampling to death those hardy ones who dared risk the dangers of the hunt.

The picture presents all the suspense, tenderness, action and romance which Grey was able to pen into the plot.
