within the inheritance of the children of Judah.

"And they had in their inheritance Beer-Sheba, and Sheba, and Miladai."

In those days the land of Sheba was one of the wealthiest of the world—the world that civilization knew.

The wealth of the region is hinted at in II Chronicles, chapter IX, in the description of one of history's most famous visits:

"And when the Queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon she came to prove Solomon with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company and camels that bore spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones; and when she was come to Solomon, she commended with him of all that was in her heart."

"And King Solomon gave to the Queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked beside that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants."

Malraux, an author, was the 1933 winner of the Goncourt literary prize. He is an archaeologist and a veteran explorer.

Before his departure, February 23, he told friends that if his plane was forced down on the desert of Roubat-El-Khail, death from hunger and thirst was inevitable.

The land of Sheba no longer is a land of plenty.

DEATH FLAGS DOWN RACING PILOT AT EL CENTRO

Ernie Triplett (left), whose racing exploits earned him the title of "blond terror" of the nation's speedways, was killed with two others in an accident at the El Centro, Cal., dirt track. AUTO RACERS MANHANDLE NEWSPAPER CAMERAMEN

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—(AP)—The Examiner said today that complaints charging kidnaping were being prepared by the district attorney's office against three members of the automobile racing fraternity here accusing them of the kidnaping of a reporter and photographer of the newspaper at a cemetery on Wednesday.

The victims, John Bensus, photographer, and James Lee, reporter, were abducted, the Examiner said, while assigned to the burial of Ernie Triplett, noted driver, who was killed on Sunday in a four-car collision at a race at Imperial, Cal. Besides Triplett, George Smyth, another driver, and C. F. Hafley, a mechanic, also were killed.

Bensus, the newspaper said, was beaten severely by a group of men and Lee was manhandled. The photographer's machine was destroyed and the two men, after being forced into offices, were driven to the offices of the newspaper.

There "the kidnapers openly admitted they had seized the newspaper men," said the Examiner, "and declared it was a direct result of the Examiner's vigorous campaign against legalized murder on the race tracks of southern California."

"Further threats were made in the presence of editorial executives and the racing delegation served an ultimatum that no pictures of the funerals of track death victims or of accidents should be published in the future."

Ten or fifteen men seized Bensus at the burial rites, knocked him to the ground, kicked him about the face and body and, with blood streaming down his face, marched him to his automobile, forcing him to surrender his keys and drove him to the newspaper office. Lee was thrown into another machine.

A picture of the funeral services for Smyth was published today by the newspaper.

REFERENDUM FOR SALES TAX FILED WITH SECRETARY

It was estimated that this tax would raise $700,000 annually. Two other important laws authorize the construction of a state tuberculosis hospital and state insane ward in Portland, subject to the approval of the voters at the special election May 18. Officials estimated that the two institutions would cost approximately $600,000 provided the sites were donated.

Another outstanding law authorizes the state forester to order the suspension of logging operations during periods of hazardous weather conditions. The original bill, as submitted to the legislature, was applicable to the entire state, but later was amended to include only western Oregon. A number of legislators opposed the bill on the ground that it gave a state official powers even
