This Summons is published in the Medford Mail Tribune, Medford, Oregon, by Order of the Honorable H. D. Norton, Judge of the above entitled court, duly made on the 9th day of March, 1934.

Chapter One PERFECT STENOGRAPHER PRING rain pelted at the office windows of the Bevins Construction Company.

Judith Lane looked at the window even as her fingers beat a ratatata-ratatata on her typewriter. She should have known better than to wear a brand new suit on a morning when the wind was bound to blow up a storm.

With quick fingers she whisked the sheet from the roller, slid it across the desk to her employer, Tom Bevins, switched on his desk light with one hand and with the other reached for the telephone which whirred impatiently.

"Bevins Construction Company, Miss Lane, speaking, Oh yes, Jackson, I'll tell him. You'd better park the car and meet him in the lobby."

The big head with its shock of iron gray hair turned with reluctance. "Tell him to go back home. I've got three hours' work ahead of me. I'll call him when I'm ready."

"But Mr. Tom, you're scheduled to go to the Clement dinner. Mrs. Bevins called this afternoon and asked me to see that you left here by five o'clock. It's five fifteen now."

"Confound the Clements. Listen and chatter and not a thing for a own capital, if necessary, and with this end in view will leave here June first with my engineers to make a complete survey of the project."

"I am going to want someone from your office, either you or one of your partners, to accompany me on this trip for the purpose of searching titles, etc. My secretary, Miss Lane, will be available for any stenographic work in connection with the project both here and in the field, and will be familiar with all details pertaining to the expedition, should you call at the office during my temporary absence."

"I will appreciate your immediate attention to this matter and wish to know at your earliest convenience, which one of you (better make that

Judith reached for her note book, snapped a rubber band over the first pages, chose a finely pointed pencil and waited.

"Dale, Lampere and Morrison... Better address this to Lampere, make it informal. Dear... ah, dear Morton: I spoke to you some time ago about the Rio Diablo project."

"In case you've forgotten (strike that out). To refresh your memory, about ten years ago, a fly-by-night realty company conceived the idea of damming the Rio Diablo, a temperamental stream in south-west Texas, north and east of the Rio Grande, a particularly desolate region."

"The idea of the dam was all right. I have no doubt but what irrigation and controlled water supply will turn it into one of the leading citrus fruit sections of the world. However, after they'd talked a lot of poor suckers (strike that out) homeseekers into investing their money in the land; had built a railroad spur into the country to carry these poor... ah, homeseekers, there, they decamped."

"When the affair (put in another word for affair, Judy) came to my notice I made a quick trip down there. I found about a hundred of these homeseekers still there because they didn't have any place else to go. They had sold their old homes to invest in this desert land and were there grubbing a mere existence out of the soil. The spur had been abandoned and their condition was pitiable."
