

MEIERS RETIRING STIRS NEW HOPE AMONG ASPIRANTS

PORTLAND, March 12.—(AP)—The resignation of politics by Governor Julius L. Meier today continued to stir tongues throughout the state and to give aspirants for the governorship a new course upon which to train their actions and their ambitions.

In a dramatic conclusion to the second of a series of statements outlining his administration of the past four years, the governor Saturday night declared "In announcing my retirement from politics tonight, I do so with the glad conviction that I have served honorably and usefully.

"In thus eliminating myself as a candidate for governor you may be sure of my constant devotion to Oregon, its people—their welfare and prosperity."

Oregon, he said "should now seek a governor who will be able to maintain those methods that have now been set in operation."

The Morning Oregonian, in commenting today on the governor's determination to step out of politics, said "This newspaper thinks Mr. Meier has been a worthy governor."

"On his record," the paper continued, "it would have supported him as Republican nominee had he sought and obtained the Republican nomination."

The editorial said that Meier, has "notwithstanding charges to the contrary—growing mainly out of disgruntlement because he spent little time in Salem—worked hard and faithfully and effectively at the job of administering the governor's office."

"In his impending retirement now," the paper continued, "he has earned and is entitled to the appreciation and well wishes of the state and its people."

The county court Saturday adopted a plan, whereby all applications for permits to sell beer and wine, outside of incorporated cities in the county, will be made direct to the state liquor board. The law provides that the county court can make recommendations for licenses, or that they can be made direct to the state board. The action of the county court was taken, in the expectation it would clear the local beer-wine situation, and provide state regulation.

The county court, in letters addressed to applicants, sets forth that the state law requires an investigation of all applicants, and their reliability be made. The county court has no funds for this purpose and could not make recommendation without first making an investigation. It is felt that the money required for the beer-wine investigations could be better used in maintaining other county items.

Signs point that there will be a large number of applications for licenses. Some of the applicants are of known stability and responsibility. Others are not. The county court has refused several applications from country districts.

CALL MEETS ON CORN, HOG PLAN

The corn-hog reduction program is now well under way in Jackson county with slightly more than half of the federal estimate for this county already signed up. While no dead line has been set as yet for the final date for closing, indications are that it is not very far off.

Meetings have been arranged for the coming week at the following places: Ashland, Tuesday, March 13, City Hall, 8:00 p. m. Sams Valley, Wednesday, March 14, Schoolhouse, 8:00 p. m.

At these meetings community committees will be elected and the program for corn-hog benefits explained by County Agent Fowler. All those who have already signed contracts as well as those farmers who have produced an average of two litters for 1932 and 1933 should be present.

JUDGE DAY RETURNS TO COUNTY DUTIES

County Judge Earl B. Day returned to his desk this morning after a short illness, caused by a rheumatic fever and cold. He is now fully recovered. He left the hospital last Saturday, highly refreshed by a rest. Since assuming the office last August, by appointment, Judge Day has been working hard straightening out county affairs, so sadly muddled by the turmoil. Systematic order has now been restored and the strain lessened.

KIWANIS IN FAVOR CANCELLING GAME WITH ASHLANDERS

The southern Oregon basketball situation was discussed to great extent today at the meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Hotel Medford following an address by Coach Darwin K. Bingham, in which he traced the history of Medford's athletic relations.

While a number of club members expressed the belief that a third game with Ashland should be scheduled to determine the southern Oregon championship, the majority obviously favored cancellation of athletic relations with Ashland as result of the protest filed, following the barn painting episode.

George W. Ager, member of the Bend Kiwanis club, and former school superintendent of Jackson county, who is now connected with the transient relief station at Talent, was also a speaker at today's luncheon, and the main address was given by A. O. Soderberg, Medford scout executive.

He stressed the possibilities here for developing scouting and great regret at the fact that there are but three troops in a city, which should thru population, have between 10 and 12.

He announced that the Medford Legion post is organizing a troop and stated that he was confident there was sufficient leadership in this city to warrant organization of many more troops.

There are now 925,000 scouts in the United States and officers expect the number to exceed the million mark by the end of the year, Soderberg stated. There are 125,000 men volunteering their time to scouting and only 600 paid leaders in the organization.

A training course for leaders is planned in southern Oregon to include representatives of Ashland, Jacksonville, Gold Hill, Eagle Point and Medford, starting March 20.

PREHISTORIC MAN WILL BE SOUGHT IN EAST MONTANA

By DON MOYLE (United Press Special Correspondent.)

RED LODGE, Mont.—(UP)—Eastern Montana, scene of many fossil finds, may have been the "cradle of mankind," in the belief of Dr. J. C. P. Siegfried, Montana paleontologist.

Spurred by this belief, Dr. Siegfried hopes to launch at Bearfoot Butte one of the greatest and most specialized "man-hunts" ever carried on within Montana's borders, he revealed today.

The search would be for remains of the prehistoric man, who, Dr. Siegfried long has believed, once inhabited this area.

The Red Lodge scientist said that he plans to bring into the Red Lodge district specialists in the separate fields of science dealing with the history of man.

If present plans are carried out, anthropologists, paleontologists, geologists and other representatives of science would be brought here to carry on an intensive study and research in the "Beartooth shales" near here, which have produced some of the most interesting fossil finds in recent years.

A long believer for years that Montana might hold the secret of man's mysterious beginning and establish herself as the site of the long-sought-for Garden of Eden, Dr. Siegfried's hopes were bolstered last summer, when members of the International Geological congress visited this region.

This group was composed of internationally known scientists and included Sir Arthur Smith Woodward, world-famous anthropologist and co-discoverer of the Pitdown Man near Sussex, England.

Briton Impressed.

Sir Arthur was much impressed with the possibilities of this region, and stated that the ancient river terraces which abound here offered a promising field for the finding of a prehistoric man. The British scientist urged that a systematic search be conducted.

Further encouraging statements were made by Dr. W. T. Thom, Jr., University of Princeton scientist and leader of the Scott Pond Geological expedition, which has been sent to this region for the past four summers by the eastern university.

Dr. Siegfried has made several trips east recently and has endeavored to interest scientists and philanthropists in sponsoring an expedition for researching in the area adjacent
