Hipless Outfits With Eccentric Collars, Sleeves and Pleats Favored by Some—Skirt Length Is Held.

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS.—(UP)—As the bi-annual Paris fashion races draw to a close the United Press presents an accurate score card revealing the points featured by the ten top houses of haute couture.
In keeping this score, the United Press has borne in mind skirt length, featured colors and color combinations, novel ideas, hip tendencies, hat modes, the odd use of fur and special fabrics that will give costumes entirely new effects.
You will find that some of the houses, Maggy Rouff and Lucile Paray, for instance, show no hats, but that their attention is consumed by hipless outfits with eccentric collars, sleeves and pleatings. You may well imagine the hats necessary to complete their ensembles, and it is nice to leave something to a clever woman's imagination.
In importance, the United Press would stress Patou's colors; Lanvin's evening wraps; Schiaparelli's hats and novel cloths; Worth's color combinations; Molyneux's neckline; Chanel's skirt lengths; Lelong's hip ideas; Maggy Rouff's accessories (with emphasis on collars and sleeves; Lucile Paray's blouse drapings and skirt lengths, and Heim's furs.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS CITE REASONS FOR RELATIONS BREAK

When the Medford high school football team played Jefferson high of Portland two years ago, Medford had to pay Ashland $210 to secure the latter's release of a contract. When the postponed game was played the gate receipts amounted to about $70. It was a series of happenings like this and an uncompromising attitude on the part of Ashland officials, that prompted the severance of athletic relations, Medford school chiefs said.
To Play Sams Valley.
Steps were taken last night by the Southern Oregon basketball committee to clear the title situation. The board ordered that Ashland high play a series of three games with Sams Valley, secondary champions of the county, to determine the southern Oregon team to enter the state tournament.
The basketball committee is composed of Principal C. G. Smith of Medford, Principal B. C. Forsythe of Ashland and Principal McDonald of Grants Pass.
The ruling is as follows:
"According to a decision reached by the 15th district basketball board, the Ashland team is requested to represent this district at the state tournament at Salem March 21 to 25, provided that the Ashland team is able to win a two or three-game series as may be required, with the Sams Valley high school, winner of the minor league of this district."
Arrangement for the Sams Valley-Ashland series is expected to be completed today between the two schools. It is planned to play one game on the Ashland floor, one on the Sams Valley floor and the third game, if necessary on a neutral floor.
The severance of athletic relations came as a surprise, to most Medford people, but it was known to be imminent by those acquainted with the situation, which has been "unsatisfactory for five years."
Medford school patrons and fans, supported the action of the local school authorities. The general sentiment was that it was necessary, and the move is approved.

RELIGIOUS STUDY NO SPUR FOR MORALITY

CHICAGO.—(UP) After conducting week-day classes in religious education, Edward B. Bartlett, graduate student in education at Northwestern university, has found that attendance at classes and familiarity with the Bible do not necessarily make an honest boy or girl.
"Pupils who attend such classes," Bartlett stated, "are superior in Biblical information to those who do not, and slightly above the average in ethical information, but this knowledge does not have any bearing on honest behavior."

AFTERNOON DRESSES TO SEE BIG CHANGE FOR SPRING IS WORD

PARIS.—(UP)—He says: "You can't escape it. Certain things are inevitable." Who is he, and what's it all about? It's HEIM and it's about the new spring cloths. He goes on to say:
"The spring of 1934 will see a definite change in afternoon dresses which will be divided into two distinct classes: first, the practical dress or ensemble suitable for town wear, shopping, informal luncheons; second, the dress or ensemble which must do duty from cocktail hour to bed time.
"This second type of costume, for the end of the day—the 'Tag End' dress, although answering a definite need, has not yet become firmly established as a distinct type in spite of the efforts of the dressmaker modelists. The reason for this is that such a costume cannot be developed without some experiment. Its object is to supply a need in a modern life in which customs and habits themselves have undergone great changes until a fitting ensemble has been evolved. It is a development which borrows from both the afternoon costume and the evening gown, and is one worth watching."
A "word to the wise" and you know the rest. Take this little tip and keep an eye out for the full flowering of the Tag End dress that will most surely be a Heaven-sent answer to the prayer of the limited wardrobe.

LUMBER SUIT ON IN CIRCUIT COURT

The suit of R. L. Putnam against Avergie Brothers, sawmill operators of Coletta for $6335.41 for alleged failure to comply with timber contract, is under way before a jury in circuit court.

RAYON BECOMES POPULAR CLOTH

In terms of yardage, Americans used over 800,000,000 yards of rayon cloth in 1933; about enough to make eight undergarments for every woman and girl in the country, or about five dresses for each one. This was a 36 per cent increase over the previous year. Without these statistics, folks probably wouldn't realize just how synthetic the taste of woman is becoming.
It got started with the gin, and then worked into the lingerie. Count Hilaire Chardonnet, French scientist, discovered the secret of the manufacture of synthetic fibers. His name was preserved in chardonnet, one of the synthetic yarn mixtures somebody whipped up for the pants, hosiery, underwear, curtains, bedspreads and dresses of the nation.
