FEDERAL HANDLING OF AIR MAIL URGED BY EX-ARMY HEAD

Roosevelt administration for a second time for its action in turning the airmail over to the army, spurned last night Secretary of War Dern's invitation to help in a broad study of army aviation.

Early today a conciliatory answer hummed over the telegraph wires to the airmail. In it Secretary Dern said: "Your telegram indicates a misconception of the purposes of the committee on which I asked you to serve."

Wants Thorough Study "I desire a comprehensive study of army aviation in which carrying airmail will figure only incidentally as a lesson in determining the efficiency or shortcomings of the army air corps, regarding which the public is bewildered so far as national defense is concerned."

The new break between the famous airmail and the administration over the white-hot airmail controversy stirred much interest today. Such terms as "unfair," "unjust" and "contrary to American principles" dotted the telegram in which Lindbergh turned down the war department invitation.

Honor Appreciated "I greatly appreciate," Lindbergh said, "the honor of your request that I become a member of a special committee to study and report upon army aviation in relation to national defense," the telegram began.

"I would of course be glad to contribute in any way that I can to the maintenance of national defense. However, according to the announcement by the war department, this committee is to study and report upon performance by the army air corps in its mission to carry the airmail as directed by executive order."

"I believe that the use of the army air corps to carry the airmail was unwarranted and contrary to American principles. This action was unjust to the airlines whose contracts were cancelled without trial. It was unfair to the personnel of the army air corps who had neither equipment designed for the purpose nor adequate time for training in a new field."

"It has unnecessarily greatly damaged all American aviation." His closing sentence was similar to an earlier criticism he leveled at the administration on February 11, soon after the postoffice department took the mails away from private flying companies on charges of "collusion."

The condemnation of commercial aviation by cancellation of all airmail contracts and the use of the army on commercial air lines will unnecessarily and greatly damage all American aviation.

Colonel Lindbergh, who is technical adviser to Transcontinental & Western Air, one of the companies whose contracts was cancelled, sent his first protest direct to President Roosevelt. It was made public before the president read it, and the result was a rebuke from the White House.

Invited to serve on the committee with Lindbergh were Orville Wright, Clarence Chamberlain and others. Wright declined for reasons of health, but Chamberlain accepted, saying: "They picked a committee that represents views on both sides of the fence. * * * The army is perfectly capable of carrying the mail, but it needs more training, more equipment, more time."

There was no indication today as to whether Lindbergh would reconsider his refusal to serve. At President Roosevelt's order a survey designed to produce a new air policy for the United States was pressed. There were some indications that the upshot may be a proposal to set up an agency to control all aviation—army, naval and civil. Speculation along this line has gone so far as to forecast that Brig. Gen. William Mitchell may be put in charge of this all-potent agency.

PRIZE ADMAN!

Thomas Clapp, senior in journalism at the University of Oregon, has been awarded third prize in the national advertising copy contest sponsored by E. Fougera and Company. He also won first prize in the University of Oregon contest, in competition with 86 other students.

Clapp was awarded the prize for his advertisement for the Chamberlain typewriter, in which he pointed out the advantages of the machine over other makes.

Ramon Novarro Is Star of Romantic Craterian Picture

Romantic, in a light musical atmosphere, "The Cat and the Fiddle," now playing at the Craterian theatre, holds definite entertainment value for the regular theatre-goer and should be more than ordinarily attractive to those who appreciate good music. Clean and wholesome throughout, the picture depends upon the romantic and dramatic story values, plus the Jeanette MacDonald and Ramon Novarro singing to put over its punches. It does adapt one unusual tack in that the climatic sequence is presented in color.

Given a continental atmosphere, the story action is centered in Brussels and Paris. In situations that permit light as well as comedy, Ramon Novarro as Victor, traditionally poor but ambitious composer, is attracted to Miss MacDonald playing the role of Shirley, who knows that the real money is in popular ballads. Realizing that life will be easier if she tolerates this odd creature, rather than having him continually pester her, the two get together. With Charles Butterworth meandering in and out in typical Butterworth fashion, Novarro, who has hacked his score for taxi fare, must recover it for an audition before the Professor (Jean Hersholt) Frank Morgan, playing the role of Daudet, considers the classical stuff worthless, but is much impressed by the ability and beauty of Jeanette. Promoting her for romantic and financial reasons, he publishes her numbers and puts lots of ballroom into their selling.

Moving to Paris, working under Jeanette's charity, Novarro finds the affair between her and Horgan becoming too irksome and returns to Brussels to put the finishing touches on his operetta. When, at the last moment, his banker runs out on him, he decides to put on the show alone. Harkening to the old call of love, Jeanette steps into the prima donna role and sings Ramon's composition to an artistic and commercial success. There is real romance tinged with comedy and good music in "The Cat and the Fiddle" and judging from comments heard after the picture's screening, the producers have not missed an opportunity to mix romance with comedy.

Why Get Up Nights! Make This 25c Test Lax the bladder as you would the bowels. Drive out impurities and excessive acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire.
