Jailed by state police on transporting and importing 170 gallons of alcohol. George C. Cesse of Seattle waived his preliminary hearing in justice of the Peace L. A. Roberts' court at Ashland Saturday afternoon and was bound over to the grand jury with bond set at $1,500. He is being held in the county jail.

Also arrested Friday was Jack Riedel, who was charged with ownership of a 50-gallon barrel of whiskey seized by officers in the Anderson Creek district.

Following his arrest, Riedel was released on his own recognizance and was scheduled to appear before Judge Roberts in Ashland Saturday afternoon. Failing to appear on time, a warrant was sworn out, Riedel re-arrested and placed in jail. His hearing will probably be held Monday.

FILM HONORS OF YEAR TO HEPBURN AND BRITON STAR

HOLLYWOOD, March 17.—(AP)—The court of film royalty opened its doors today to Katherine Hepburn and Charles Laughton.

By the acclaim of their fellow workers they were chosen at a banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the actress and the actor whose work was the best upon the screen in 1933.

Miss Hepburn, spirited, red-headed eccentric of Hollywood, joined the purple by her performance in "Morning Glory," and Laughton by his acting in "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

But it was a strange coronation, for neither the queen nor the king was present to wear the crown. Laughton was in England making a picture and Miss Hepburn was in New York.

King Henry the Eighth would have been amazed at the prelate who bestowed the crowns. He was a buffoon—Will Rogers—and his garb at the banquet of film notables was a blue serge business suit.

"My purpose in being here is to give out the loot," said Rogers. He mentioned the name of the academy which contains the noun, "science."

"If making movies is a science, it's a miracle to me," he drawled. "This business is a racket."

In choosing Miss Hepburn and Laughton for the annual awards, the academy members voted the second best performance by an actress to May Robson, white-haired veteran of stage and screen, for her work in "Lady for a Day," and chose Diana Wynyard for the third outstanding performance in "Cavalcade."

Of the three actors nominated, Paul Muni received the second largest vote for the best performance by an actor for his work in "I Am a Fugitive From the Chain Gang," and Leslie Howard was ranked as third for his acting in "Berkeley Square."

The best picture award went to the production, "Cavalcade," and for his work in that film, Frank Lloyd won the distinction of the best direction. Robert Lord's original story, "One Way Passage," won in its field.

Horned Toads For High School Class

Two horned toads, "shy of manner," arrived in Medford yesterday from Rockwell field, Colorado, Cal., to become students in E. M. Hussong's biology class at the local high school. Although they didn't appear the least bit interested in local events, upon first sight, their senders, Merritt Probstfield and Donald J. Welch, sent accompanying assurances that they, with humor, "will be agreeable as all times."

INSULL CHARTERS SHIP; SAILS FOR POINTS UNKNOWN

PIRAEUS, Greece, March 18.—(Sunday)—(AP)—Samuel Insull sailed at 12:25 a. m. today aboard the Greek freighter Malotis, seeking a new haven of refuge from American authorities. The hour of sailing was established definitely after conflicting reports had been investigated.

The former utilities king said before sailing that he expected to land at Djibouti, French Somaliland, at the southern extremity of the Red Sea, and that he would go to Abyssinia.

Though Insull said he planned to land at Djibouti, it was stated here that the fact he did not have a French visa probably would prevent him from getting off at that port. Some persons believed he would make out a new itinerary when he got on the high seas, and would try to keep secret his future plans.

The port authorities did not require Insull to make a formal statement of his destination and so he can make whatever plans he desires. Insull was brought back to Greece last evening without his knowledge. After a brief time in port, during which he stayed on the ship, the 74-year-old fugitive started out again to roam the seas in search of a new refuge from American justice.

He embarked secretly Wednesday aboard the tramp steamer Malotis. He had expected them to head for the Red sea. The 75-hour dash for freedom of the man the United States seeks on embezzlement and larceny charges ended at 7:15 p. m. at Piraeus.

'SPECTATOR' PAYS PUTNAM TRIBUTE

Of interest to many local folk who knew or knew of the late Arthur Putnam, sculptor, and brother of George Putnam, former editor of the Mail Tribune, is this week's issue of The Spectator. For much space in it is devoted to the artist, whose road to fame came to a sudden end in death.

Photographs of two of his animal figures form the cover of this week's issue of the magazine, and a page is devoted to a review of his work by Gabriel Lavare.

An appreciation of the life and work of Arthur Putnam is presented in Julie Heyneman's book, published in 1932, the article announces. The biographical sketch was published in a limited edition as a memorial, through a bequest left for that purpose by the late U. S. Senator James D. Phelan.
