RUM BUSINESS GOOD, LOCAL IMBIBERS TRY NIPPONESE FAVORITE

Saturday saw many more bottles of liquor leave the state liquor store for private channels, the total business of retailing that of the store's first day of operation, Earl Foy, manager, stated this morning. Fifty-two permits were issued and business for the day totaled $407.20, of this amount $355.20 was represented in liquor sales. The sake, Japanese drink, which came from Japan in a shipment last week, is practically all gone. Mr. Foy stated, and the Japanese people of Medford haven't bought any of it yet. The drink, however, has proved exceptionally popular with other residents. While business at the state owned liquor store has been very good, the feeling is prevalent that the bootleggers are still getting a share of the trade and every effort is being made to shut down on this illegal business, which is robbing the government of the tax due and at the same time placing in circulation an inferior grade of liquor. Officers over the last week-end are said to have apprehended several alleged violators and a stringent campaign against them will be continued.

Coming Tuesday

The Hlito theatre introduces a new star to Medford tomorrow when "Man of Two Worlds" opens a three-day engagement. The star is Francis Lederer, whose sensational success on London and New York stages led to a screen contract. The story deals with a native of Greenland who, falling in love with a photograph of a London society girl, leaves his native wife, goes to London and tries to adapt himself to the ways of the civilized world. His struggle to understand the new world he has chosen, and his strange romance with Elissa Landi, the society girl, form the basis of the plot.

Rogers Pleases in "David Harum"

No ordinary Will Rogers picture is "David Harum," now at the Crater-Lake theatre. It is grand screen merchandise, carrying values in every phase that makes it unusual entertainment, a homey, humorous and sense-pleaser which was definitely established by the applause which greeted each final fadeout by yesterday's audiences. "David Harum" is Will Rogers at his best. It seems as though the columnist-comedian's enthusiasm for his role had an inspiring effect on the supporting cast, as toponch performances, reflecting the real spirit of the "David Harum" story, are contributed all the way down the line. Opening in the nineties, at a time when business conditions were similar to the present, Harum's ad lib philosophical analogies create an up-to-date impression. Then, as the rural New England story unfolds, the audience has a close understanding of what is happening. Harum's slick "hoss trades" with the deacon; his hard-boiled small town banking practices; his home life with his sister Polly, are all lively. There is an exciting punch to the trotting horse race won by Harum's bet as the entire country fair at Sanduski, N. Y., is depicted. "The McGinty" and "The Ra-boom-de-ay." Then a surprise climax that is a gale of laughter.

DR. KEENE, NIFTY DRESSER IN 1887

Dr. J. M. Keene of this city, one of southern Oregon's best known citizens, appeared in this week's Sunday Oregonian's old time photographic section along with three of his Portland pals: Gary Jacobs, Ivan Humason, and the late Dr. George H. Strowbridge. The photo was taken in 1887 when all the young men were studying in Philadelphia. Dr. Keene at the Philadelphia school of dentistry; Jacobs at the school of design; Humason at the school of pharmacy; and Dr. Strowbridge at the medical school. The caption on the picture is "Portland Beau Bummels in the Plug Hat of 1887." Judging by the photograph Dr. Keene was not as handsome in his twenties as he is today, and a ranch hat and a blue shirt becomes him better than a topper, and a double breasted overcoat.

Death In Bakery Oven Is Averted

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP) Take it from William Phillips, a baker's oven stays hot a long time. He became wedged in the shaft of an oven yesterday and if police hadn't torn away the front in quick time, Phillips probably would have been baked to death. At it was, he spent a tortuous 45 minutes and is suffering today from severe burns on his back.

AMBERGRIS FIND OF LITTLE VALUE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—(AP)—Ninety-nine per cent of the "ambergris" picked up on the shores of San Francisco bay in recent weeks was valueless, the Smith-Emery Chemical company announced today. But about one per cent of the specimens tested in the Smith-Emery laboratories were genuine, company officials reported, and will bring their discoverers a sizeable return. The price paid went to be $32 an ounce—only between $8 and $10. Ambergris is a substance expelled by sick whales and of value in the perfume industry in bringing out and preserving delicate odors. Potato Market Continues Dull

PORTLAND, Ore., March 19.—(AP) Dulness continues to characterize the speculative element in potatoes according to general comment in the trade here today, and there appears to be lack of encouragement to holdere in all sections of the country. Pits are being opened in leading sections. Local storage houses are still burdened with record supplies, most of them owned by speculators who fought vigorously last fall to obtain supplies.
