BEESON DIARY TELLS OF PIONEER CHARIVARI IN SOUTHERN OREGON

Charivaris were popular among southern Oregon pioneers of 1856, excerpts from a diary dated that year reveal. The diary was written by Welborn Beeson who settled on Wagner creek, and was brought to general committee headquarters of Oregon's Diamond Jubilee this week by Welborn Beeson, Jr., in interest of the celebration here next June.

Under the date of March 14, the diary states, the Beeson family was badly frightened when guns were heard firing and people shouting, leaving the thought Indians were on the warpath. However, it was soon remembered neighbors were serenading a newlywed couple nearby. The practice has remained unchanged through years.

The diary tells of numerous hardships encountered by early settlers in their efforts to develop southern Oregon in the face of constant forays by Indians responsible for the deaths of many settlers in this section during 1856. It tells of the formation of volunteer companies of soldiers to give battle to the hostile redskins whose depredations covered the length of the valley.

Despite the age of the booklet, its carefully penned words are as legible as if they had been written yesterday. When it was written there was but one county school in the valley and emigrant roads leading through this section were akin to wandering cow trails.

Phoenix

PHOENIX, March 22.—(Spl.)—Young People's Group of the Phoenix Presbyterian church met at the manse Friday for a business meeting and social hour. The following officers were elected: President, William Cottrell; vice president, Winifred Inman; corresponding secretary, Elaine De Vries; recording secretary and treasurer, Howard Denzer; prayer meeting chairman, Grace De Vries; social chairman, Kathryn Denzer; missionary chairman, Mabel Matthews.

The Pioneer Club basketball team reports two good games with a group of boys from St. Mary's academy. The boys are undertaking a new project on Saturday when they plan to work on a tennis court on the church grounds.

PHOENIX LADIES' AID TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

The society will furnish dessert and coffee. All members and friends of the church are invited to attend the supper and anniversary observance. Bring a covered dish and come. A silver offering will be taken.

Helen Keller Changes Roles With Teacher as Latter Becomes Blind

By GILBERT McALLISTER
United Press Correspondent.
(Copyright, 1934, by United Press)

URRAY, ROSSHIRE, Scotland, March 22 — (UP) — Secluded in a lonely highland farmhouse, Helen Keller is teaching the woman who taught her to read, talk and play.

It was Anne Sullivan Macy, who took Miss Keller in hand when she was a child, and blind, deaf and mute. Mrs. Macy has been Miss Keller's companion constantly since then, and now she, herself, is practically blind. Miss Keller is patiently teaching her to read Braille.

Lead Simple Life.

I journeyed through one of Scotland's most desolate sections today to find them together, in crude surroundings, living a simple life, which they both enjoy.

Their farm cottage is near the village of Muir-of-Ord, in the shadows of Rosshire's towering peaks. The snow lies four feet deep in the lane leading up to the house. Miss Keller and Mrs. Macy are living on one of the most remote and inaccessible spots in the British Isles.

Their only neighbors in an area of 100 square miles are six families of deer hunters. In the nearby village of Muir-of-Ord, the population is less than a score. The people of Muir-of-Ord pursue the task of blending whisky, and their business has picked up noticeably since the American prohibition law was repealed.

Home in Forest.

The lights in the Keller farmhouse presented a welcome sight as I trudged across the Moorland where herds of red deer were huddled together, frightened by the fury of the March gale. Miss Keller's farm is set in the largest deer forest of Scotland, and behind the forest the great hills of Rosshire raise their loftiness in a vast, ineffable backdrop.

"They are the mighty laboratories of rain, mist and wind," Miss Keller told me in speaking of the mountains. She cannot see them, but she constantly senses their presence.

Blue peat smoke whirls from the little chimney of the cottage and it tells the tale of another sense which Miss Keller retains. Peat is the only fuel used in the farmhouse. Miss Keller, who can't see nor talk nor hear, loves the sweet aroma of the burning moss.

Two shaggy collies barked a greeting as I approached the door. Inside I found Miss Keller, Mrs. Macy and Mrs. Polly Thomson. Mrs. Thomson ushered me into the kitchen, where a tremendous fire was roaring on the hearth.

Floor of Stone.

The kitchen floor is of stone. There is a crude wooden table and several comfortable, hand-hewn chairs. A small wooden clock, with a long chain pendulum, hangs on the wall.

There are five rooms in the house. Miss Keller is constantly busy. She occupies herself with all manner of work, from house-keeping to writing. Her correspondence is voluminous. She is up at 7 a. m., and has a breakfast of porridge. Then she launches into her day's work, which would tax the energy of many stronger persons.

"Yes," Miss Keller wrote in answer to my question, "it is true. My teacher is now practically blind. I read to her every day, and I make notes for her in Braille.

"She knew Braille when she was at school, and when she taught me. But then Braille was written with many letters. She would punch them out for me on Braille tablets. But since then the system has undergone a great change. About half the letters are different. But it has not been difficult for me to teach Mrs. Macy the new letters.

May Recover Sight.

"We have lots of fun when she makes mistakes, using the old letters. She will never read Braille rapidly. She never did. But it passes the time for her to puzzle out the words under the new system. It passes the time for her while she waits in the dark for day to dawn and for the shadows to flee. She may, you know, recover her sight."

Miss Keller and Mrs. Macy have been inseparable companions since Miss Keller was seven years old. Mrs. Macy was her nurse, and taught her the things that brought her a world of many dimensions. Miss Keller is 53 and Mrs. Macy 67.

FEEBLE MINDED INCREASE SHOWN AMONG CHILDREN

General Breakdown Educational System of Country Is Stressed at Health Meeting by State Chief

A general breakdown of the educational system in this country and a steady increase of feeble-mindedness in Oregon were shown in startling figures presented yesterday to the Jackson County Public Health association, in meeting in Ashland, by Dr. Frederick Stricker, head of the Oregon State Board of Health, and Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the Oregon Tuberculosis society, main speaker at the all-day meeting.

Dr. Stricker urged the people to give more consideration to the very discouraging situation, the steady increase of feeble-mindedness in this state. Welfare agencies, he stated, are justified in utilizing all possible means of preventing this increase, which has been noted in 26 counties of the state.

Many In Institution

In one county, he stated, out of each 1000 persons, there are 28 in the state institutions.

An increase of child problems was cited by Mrs. Dunbar, who pointed out that there will be 20,000 public schools in the nation closed by the end of this year, according to figures released by the president of the National Education association. In these schools there are 1,025,000 children.

A total of 200,000 children has represented the intake in schools each year. Since child labor has been eliminated from factories, this total has grown to over one million. At the same time there has been a marked decrease in the number of teachers hired, the health worker noted. Of this million, 100,000 are high school people, who must be given wholesome education and recreation.

Sing Sing Cited

There are now 80,000 persons in Sing Sing prison under 30 years of age, the head of the bureau of crime prevention has revealed. Last year fifteen billion dollars were spent in the United States on rackets and racketeers. This sum, Mrs. Dunbar stated, is five and one-half times as great as the amount spent on education. With such a ration the country cannot expect to decrease crime.

Social forces, the speaker declared, are a reality and can consciously be directed. They can determine what will be built and maintained in services and machinery for the common good.

All social welfare workers were urged by Mrs. Dunbar to get into the "drama," to take an active part in reaching a solution of the very dark educational problem of the day.

Health Requisite

The first requisite, of course, is health, she explained. Without that as foundation, no training, however wholesome, can achieve the desired results. The average expenditure throughout the nation on health activities per person, she placed at 50 cents. In Oregon, she added, revealing more discouraging figures, it is less than five cents.

T. B. May Flare Anew

Although tuberculosis is now decreasing, it too, will crop up again, unless there is continual vigilance, Mrs. Dunbar declared, stating that last year there was one death a day from the disease. Of these people, 16 per cent were under 20 years of age.

In closing, Mrs. Dunbar urged welfare agencies to "hold fast, plan wisely, look problems in the face and teach wherever possible."

Approximately 100 persons attended the meeting and the luncheon was served by the Ashland committee, Miss Mildred Carlton, president of the association, who recently returned from California, presided.
