Ye Smudge Pot

The National Lurens association will be organized at Burlington, Wis., soon.

Two blades of grass, three dandelions, and no telling how many weeds now grow where formerly one blade of grass reared heavenward.

The Republican candidates for governor, "will start in April to scare up the voters, and, well may the voters be scared."

It is terrible to be married to a stranger and to be marooned on a farm with only two babies for companions.

Eminent and heavy thinkers of the land now predict that when the time comes for Americans to pay for the spending of the past year, the disgust of France at her war debt obligations will seem amateurish.

Anarchist Jack Horner, loafed on the corner. Where all of his time was spent: He twiddled his thumb.

A number of tired bank clerks went golfing yesterday, instead of going to bed.

Redding, Calif., boasts a "lawyer-musician." The lawyers call him a musician, and the musicians call him a lawyer.

The new brakes on the 1934 autos are wonderful. When fully applied, the car stops "in less than three feet"—the occupants in about ten feet.

The situation with respect to the governorship campaign is still somewhat scrambled on the republican side.

Asbury Beach of the C.P.T. area, who has a lane named after him, and never used it as excuse to run for something, towed Sat. He is an old-fashioned farmer who never learned to farm, every place but on a farm.

Oregon is listed fourth among the states of the union, in the amount of crime committed in the past year.

The chief knew exactly where he had hidden them. He later flew between speeches, devoted largely to denouncing the state police as a tax-eating body, and a needless expense.

HOME CREW COMMUNISM

A dream of economic equality for all men: a belief that the moderate, evolutionary processes of self-government have failed and that an all-powerful state, tinkering with the most intimate habits of the individual, can make a better nation.

Another Great F. D. Victory

THE settlement of the threatened automobile strike is another great victory for President Roosevelt. The president did, personally, what General Johnson, as head of the NRA, negotiating with organized labor on one hand, and the manufacturers on the other, was unable to do.

How did he do it? He did it essentially by using his head. And the way President Roosevelt used his head in solving this problem is undoubtedly the way he will use it in solving other intricate problems of the New Deal, as they arise.

BRIEFLY the president achieved this victory by threatening radical action—by threatening a sharp turn to the left, which he could have taken with the powers congress had, at the beginning of his administration, granted him.

Such action, we believe history will show, is the keynote of President Roosevelt's political strategy, and reflects the essential quality of his character.

SO long as Franklin Roosevelt is president, we need fear no radical, drastic, revolutionary action. President Roosevelt has certain definite ideas as to what should be done, and he intends to do them, as far as it is possible—but not suddenly, dramatically or drastically.

He may threaten to go sharply to the left, he may, if political expediency demands even THREATEN to go to the right; but when all is said and done his course will be between the two—in the MIDDLE OF THE ROAD!

THIS was the course adopted in settling this automobile strike, it will undoubtedly be the course adopted in settling the tariff problem, the stock exchange problem, and other important problems, on the agenda of the New Deal.

At least that is the true nature of the New Deal as we see it, and speaking for ourselves, we get a big bang out of seeing the wheels go round, and this new economic and social plan, gradually taking shape.

TO return to the strike settlement. As before stated this wasn't a controversy over hours, wages or working conditions—it was in reality an attempt on the part of the American Federation of Labor to unionize the automobile industry, and the determination of the leaders of the industry to prevent it.

THE result as above stated is not a definite settlement but a compromise. The workers are to be given an opportunity to vote, for what they wish, as far as such unionization is concerned. A permanent committee is to be appointed to rule on all issues between capital and labor, particularly on the charges of discrimination against workers who wish A. F. L. affiliation.

THE president undoubtedly accomplished this result by threatening to use the extraordinary powers congress granted him in the Industrial Recovery Act, which would allow him to invoke the licensing section, and administer the affairs of the automobile industry HIMSELF, thus bringing both sides of the controversy to time, and ready to make concessions.

A VERY neat piece of work, and to our mind only added evidence that this country has in Washington today one of the most adroit and resourceful practical politicians (we use the term in no derogatory sense) who has ever occupied the White House.

congress has only authorized the sums in the Vinson bill, but there will be little question about appropriations later as sums are needed to pay Keel.

When the late Ambassador Herrick was in Paris, the state department cabled excitedly asking what to do about a stowaway aboard the trans-Atlantic plane. Mr. Herrick told his secretary to cable back: "Laugh it off." The secretary found that the diplomatic code book contained no code for "laugh."

Personal Health Service

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink.

THE MEDICINE CUPBOARD I have never seen a store or ready made medicine cabinet or first aid kit that was not a handsome package and as useful as in booklet form. There is only this difference—I assume full responsibility for the accuracy of anything I say in the booklet or in any letter or monograph or other written or printed item that goes directly from me to you, but I cannot guarantee the accuracy of everything printed in this column.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS In making solutions of dry acid colors in alcohol, ether or water the dust floats in the air and for a time afterward my spit is colored with whatever color I have used—the colors are called wool green, wool yellow, etc. Is this injurious to my health?—E. M.

So There Are Capillaries? Your discovery that "there ain't no capillaries" was truly imposing. The writer would appreciate references on the subject.—F. S. C.

I was advised by a beauty specialist never to use glycerin on my face as it grows hairs.—Mrs. O. J.

Ed Note: Readers wishing to communicate with Dr. Brady should send letters direct to Dr. William Brady, M.D., 265 E. Camino, Beverly Hills, Cal.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY BY O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK, March 26.—Diary: It came on to pour at 5 a. m. and I drew a great chair to the window, watching.

So little seeps out of the stage world and Hollywood about long and successful marriages. There are many but most conspicuous, I believe, is that of George Arliss and his wife.

Bagatelles: Ed Howe often quotes a made-up Roman philosopher he calls Silenius. . . John Drinkwater is now living at Peppy's old village of Brighton. . . Winchell Smith, playwright, left a $500,000 annuity to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state.

EUGENE, March 26.—(AP)—Declaring his "political ambitions" would be satisfied if he retained his old position as reading clerk of the house, Elbert Bede, Cottage Grove editor, today announced he would not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS YOU'VE heard, of course, this tale the park rangers tell of the bears that come furtively, like the wild things they are, up to the boundary of Crater Lake park, and the moment they step over it into the safety of Uncle Sam's protection become nonchalant, assured and easy of manner.

MR. WILSON'S father and mother were the first white couple to be married in Klamath Falls, which then was Linkville, and since in that early day—it was in 1871—Jacksonville was the county seat, he had to go over to Jacksonville to get his marriage license.

ANYWAY, Mr. Wilson—his name was Simpson Wilson—arose bright and early one morning and, with a companion, set off on horseback for the county seat.

THEY turned their horses loose to graze, cooked a frugal supper and in the course of time turned in for the night, removing their pants and shirts and going to bed in their underwear—whether red flannel or not, Mr. Wilson doesn't know.

Having good consciences, they went immediately to sleep, but some time along in the night Mr. Wilson awoke, and in the flickering light of the dying fire he beheld—almost upon him, it seemed—a bear that appeared to be about the size of Mt. Pitt.

THEY got as far as the first limb, and there they perched. By this time, they remembered their guns quite clearly, although in that startled moment of seeing the bear they'd forgotten them entirely.

But the guns were leaning up against another tree, at quite a distance, and there was the bear, looking dark and ill-humored and altogether forbidding in the half light.

REMEMBER, please, they had gone to bed in their underwear, and had left without pausing to make a toilet. And add to this the further fact that it was early in the spring, and the nights were sharp.

WHAT a lot of kidding Mr. Wilson must have had to face when he got back from Jacksonville, with his marriage license, and the tale got spread around.

PEACE The deep solemnity and beauty of funeral services here serves as a very tangible comfort for those who are left to mourn. And it is gratifying to know that cost plays no part in the unvarying quality of our service.

COP'S CURIOSITY RECOVERS BONDS

WASHINGTON—(UP)—The curiosity of a Montgomery county policeman today was responsible for the recovery of $11,000 in stock certificates and notes, stolen from the home of State Senator David Baile, of Westminster, Md.

Two weeks later, Policeman Paul Watkins, learning of the discovery, decided he would see the "pretty papers." He instructed Miles to retrieve the bag.
