DRY or light wines are the fermented juice of the grape, just as nature finishes the job, with nothing added and are generally consumed with meals.

They are the fruits in the diets of the Mediterranean races—the sturdiest and most temperate of all people. To them light wine is an item of food just as much as bread and is on the family table every day in the year.

For health—for strength and for greater relish of foods serve light wines.

And Wilderness is Paradise enow.
