JUBILEE LEADERS REPORT PROGRESS IN PREPARATIONS

Preparations for Oregon's Diamond Jubilee celebration are rapidly gaining momentum and are pointing toward one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in the northwest, a meeting last night of the general committee revealed.

The continued cooperation and participation of all residents is urged in the carrying of the heavy responsibility of Medford in acting as host city for the entire state in the dignified observance June 3 to 9 of the 75th anniversary of statehood.

Announcement was made last night an important meeting for Jacksonville citizens will be held Monday evening to discuss plans for the part that historic town will take with Medford in the celebration. Jacksonville will be one of the most important features of the entire jubilee, its numerous points of historical interest, including museums and old buildings which pre-date most of those in Oregon. Backyard gold mines will also be in operation during the jubilee.

Synopsis of the historical pageant, Oyer-Un-Gon, to be presented three nights during the celebration, was reviewed last night by Prof. Angus Bowmer, author and director. The production promises to be one of the most interesting and beautiful of its kind presented in the northwest, and will be made especially beautiful by novel lighting effects. It will be divided into episodes—Indians of Oregon, Coming of the Emigrants, Birth of Government, Dawn of Statehood and Oregon, Land of Plenty.

Quite a number of the leading members of the cast of 300 people have been selected. The Medford Gleemen, under the direction of James Stevens, will take an important part. Miss Ruth Lay of Medford has been placed in charge of dancing for the pageant and to her first call received the response of over 40 dancers.

Clayton Kirk, well known member of the Klamath Indian reservation, was present at the session and offered the cooperation of tribesmen in aiding the jubilee. He said he can bring over an Indian music band, one of the few now existent.
