COUNTY PRODUCE FEATURED 4 DAYS AT CITY MARKET

Jackson county growers will feature their produce for four days at the Portland Public market next fall, instead of one, as originally planned, it was announced today by C. Lee Wilson, president and general manager of the market company, who was a visitor in Medford, completing plans for the gigantic market fair planned. The dates, chosen by Jackson county for exhibit, are October 3, 4, 5 and 6. Early October was selected as time of the fair, due to the fine condition of produce available at that time.

Extensive facilities, free of charge, will be offered the Jackson county producers at that time, in the world's largest public market, and a delegation of Jackson county people is expected in the city for the occasion. Cold storage rooms, demonstration booths and exhibition rooms will all be available to Jackson county products, which will also be featured by Portland hotels and restaurants for the four days, Mr. Wilson said.

Civic organizations of Portland including the chamber of commerce and advertising club; newspapers, and the public market officials will cooperate with the Jackson county committee in disbursing publicity and in furnishing entertainment for the four day produce show.

There are 128 merchants in the public market and they will handle the Jackson county produce, sale of which will be advertised by the market company. The returns will be converted into the pockets of the local growers.

The ground floor space of the market, 140 by 616 feet, will be devoted to the sale of food stuffs. There will be 300 farm stalls available and three acres of free parking space for autos within the market.

Details of the program of entertainment and the plans for entry of local produce will be desseminated here through the chamber of commerce. A special committee will be appointed by the chamber of commerce to supervise Jackson county's participation.

"Much is expected from this section," Mr. Wilson stated this morning, "for you have so much to offer, and we know that the show will mean much to the housewives of Portland, for your growers are going to bring to the market the best they have to offer."

Richard Arlen has a featured role in "She Made Her Bed" coming to the Rialto theatre tomorrow. Sally Eilers and Robert Armstrong are also in leading parts.

"She Made Her Bed" is an unusual story of an auto tourist camp where persons of many kinds stop on their journeys over Gypsy Trail. Armstrong plays the proprietor, an amateur animal trainer, and Miss Eilers, his wife.

Hepburn Is Great In "Spitfire" Role

After reading of Katharine Hepburn being the recipient of the Motion Picture Academy Award for the finest performance of any screen actress during 1933, one would naturally expect great things from her.

"Spitfire", playing at the Craterian theatre, is just that. Taking even into consideration her fine characterization in "Morning Glory", which won for her the Academy Award, nevertheless her role in this latest film gives her a chance to offer an even wider scope in her apparently limitless ability. Here's a show that's right down Katharine Hepburn's alley. It's all of that. She's practically the whole show. She contributes an impressive, sometimes inspired performance.

The story is a simple but powerful heart appeal that deals more with an odd combination of spiritual character and worldly reactions than with sex. Hepburn is Trigger, a rock-throwing firebrand, both feared and misunderstood by her almost illiterate neighbors. A strange creature, she mixes prayers with profanity, talks of Christ with a daring familiarity, and though her neighbors are amazed, she feels that she knows and is close to God. However, the picture cannot be termed "religious" and really has a great many lighter moments, in which Hepburn reveals a heretofore hidden talent for light comedy. And the scenes in which she and Robert Young are romancing before she finds out about his wife, are strikingly beautiful, both in photography and in acting.

SEMON SPEAKER KIWANIS LUNCH

C. J. Semon of the Medford Concrete Construction company was the chief speaker today at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Hotel Medford. He traced the "Evolution of the Pipe Industry" and following his address the club members made a tour of the plant, where they found that it requires a lot of labor to produce pipe. The new, 100 per cent electrified unit, was visited and much pipe on display proved very interesting.

Orders for von der Hellen and Pierson to be used in construction of the Diamond Lake road, utilized particularly large pipe, each section weighing 1600 pounds.

Tile pipe and concrete forms of all kinds are distributed by the Medford firm to points throughout this territory.

Guests at today's luncheon were A. B. Martin of the Northwest Mutual Fire Insurance association, and Tom Delzell of Klamath Falls.
