Boop Girls Sour Lawsuit Inspires Tantrum When Newspaper Writer Calls

By H. ALLEN SMITH
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, May 8.—(UP)—Miss Helen Kane, the Boop-Boops-Doop girl, denounced civilization incognito today and then denounced civilization in the flesh.

Miss Kane, in fact, doesn't think the human race is being kind to her. She lost a $250,000 damage suit Saturday.

"It isn't," said Miss Kane, "the money. People have stolen the idea I put across and I am not going to stand for it."

At the St. Moritz hotel, overlooking Central park, your correspondent was admitted to room No. 2823, by a very athletic man named Max Hoffman, Jr. Mr. Hoffman is husband to the boop-doop-a-doop singer.

"Not a chance to see her," he said. "We're busy appealing the case."

"But," he went on, "come in. I'll tell you all you want to know." He wore red pajamas and used to play football at Cornell.

We sat down and looked, for a moment, at Central park.

"Helen," said Mr. Hoffman, "is in bed."

"Whee-e-e-e-e!" came a voice from the next room. Mr. Hoffman got up, opened the door, and said:

"What is it, my darling?"

"I want the cat," said Miss Kane.

The cat, a creature named Boopy, was delivered into her hands. She told her husband, at the time, that she never wanted to see another lawyer, newspaperman, judge or courtroom in all her life. And three minutes later, with Boopy, she was out in the living-room, with the cat under her arm. She had on blue pajamas and she wanted to speak her mind.

"Darling," said Mr. Hoffman, "please be careful."

"The judge," said Miss Kane, "is a ——"

"Honey," said Mr. Hoffman, "be careful with your language."

"I want to tell this United Press guy," said Miss Kane, "what happened in this case. I want him to know that I know what I'm doing. I want him to know that I'm not all boop-boop-a-doop."

"How do you spell that?" asked your correspondent.

"Ask the judge," she answered. "He is the guy who decided I was wrong."

Miss Kane had some champagne and the cat jumped on her lap. Boopy started clawing her hand.

"Boopy," she said, "is my pal. You didn't even know, by little buzzy fuzzy wuzzy kuzzy suzzy dolling dolling dolling that Mama dolling was in a drate big huge awful ole trial, wuz you?"

Boopy bit her hand again.

"You," she said to your correspondent, "can use any language you want to because I am mad, mad, mad."

"Please, Miss Kane," your correspondent urged, "let's not get all wrought up about this thing."

"I am so mad," she said, 'that I am going to spend a lot of money appealing this case. They have stolen my idea. I don't need the money. I sued these Betty Boop people for $250,000. I don't want a cent of it. All I want is vindication. It has broken my heart.

"Max, pour Mr. Smith a drink of champagne. And, Max, before I go back to bed, will you let me sing a song? I mean for this guy?"

"Sure," said Mr. Hoffman. She sang "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," with boops between the smoke.

EUROPE'S LEADERS ADVISED TO READ ROOSEVELT'S BOOK

'On Our Way' Given Cordial Reception by British Papers — Critical Post Says F. R. Saved Country

By B. C. PUGH
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

LONDON, May 8.—(AP)—The London Post suggested today that some leaders abroad—"not excluding Hitler"—should read President Franklin D. Roosevelt's new book if they would "learn how it's done."

The British edition of the American President's work, "On Our Way," appeared today. It was greeted with the most cordial recognition by London newspapers.

Post Gives Credit.

The Post, sometimes a severe critic of America, printed an editorial which said:

"Whatever verdict history may pass on the President's work as a whole, it may be anticipated with certainty that it will account him without controversy the saviour of his country at one of the darkest hours in her annals."

After citing striking passages from the book, the Post concluded:

"If fellow aspirants abroad — not excluding Hitler (Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany)—would learn how it's done, let them study 'On Our Way' and see."

There were long reviews of the volume in other newspapers.

Has Definite Aim.

The Times said the book makes clear that Mr. Roosevelt from the beginning has pursued consistently a very definite objective and, although even friendly observers have found it very difficult sometimes to reconcile his actions and pronouncements with one another, much of the criticism has been based on misconception.

"Students of political affairs everywhere will be grateful to Roosevelt for this authorized account of what he is endeavoring to do," the Times said.

The Telegraph expressed "real admiration of the great leader who is sincerely aiming at things that are worthwhile. * * * For America's and the world's sake let us pray that the Roosevelt revolution will be a success."
