Activities of Legion Auxilliary

By Mrs. Goodwin Humphrey
"Just what is this jolly making project?" Auxiliary members are asking one another. And so the purpose of this bulletin is to explain the enterprise.

A nation-wide relief enterprise to make one million glasses of jelly—and that means jams, conserves, and marmalades, too—by October 1st has been launched under the auspices of the national rehabilitation committee working in conjunction with child welfare and community service.

This unique project had been under consideration for more than a year when it was presented to the national convention in Chicago last fall by Mrs. William H. Biester, Jr. and approved. Now that spring is on its way and fresh fruits are already beginning to appear in Florida and other southern states, the jolly making project is about to be launched.

For what purpose? So that veterans and veterans' families who are in need of help, and other needy persons in every community all over the country may have wholesome, nourishing spreads for their bread.

From time to time, the auxiliary has sponsored national projects of great interest but none, perhaps, has attracted as much attention as this jolly making campaign. And for good reason! Jellies and jams are practical foods—energy foods. Every woman can make them. And they can be kept indefinitely—for Christmas baskets, Easter boxes, etc.

Of course, one million glasses of jelly sounds like an incredible, almost impossible amount to make. But when you consider the need for this food and the fact that auxiliary members number almost 500,000, it makes the individual responsibility very small indeed.

Jane Thacher Is Welcomed Here as Truly Great Artist

Convinced that they had heard a really great artist, members of a Medford audience Friday night left the Baldwin recital hall, to ponder over the program, played by Jane Thacher, pianist. And as they pondered yesterday, the glorious realization gained emphasis, which brought praise, unsurpassed in musical history here, from the lips of several critics, not given to generosity with adjectives.

To members, who had not previously heard Jane Thacher, professor of piano at the University of Oregon, in recital, the fingers of the small blonde woman had brought surprise in gigantic power of expression. To folk who had, they had brought renewed faith that realization can after all be greater than anticipation.

"Not since Teresa Carreno, that great South American pianist, touched the keys, had I heard such dynamic power and grasp of the great masters, represented on the program, especially Brahms," one musician-critic declared, with unlimited enthusiasm, adding "Not since Paderewski, had I heard such great playing."

A master of Brahms, whom she described in an informal sketch as an "angular writer of that North German type," Mrs. Thacher aroused in her audience an appreciation of the composer seldom accomplished. Her devotion to his ideal brought out the pensive quality and unrest, never before conveyed to a Medford audience.

Her program contained three Brahms compositions: "Two Intermezzi, Op. 118; Capriccio, b-minor, Op. 76, and Rhapsody, b-minor, Op. 79-1.

Guests for the evening were: Misses Anderson, Arletta Messenger, Marjorie Lindley, Ruth Luy, Mildred Patterson, Bernice Gill, Marjorie Hubbard, Dee Scheffel, Winifred Andrews, Marjorie Plak, Mildred Gregory, Emily Brown, Gertrude Watzling, Dorothy Carless and Louise Hollenback, and Meadames Ole Hansen of Grants Pass, Harold Harbour, Hall Perat, Darrel Huson, Paul Anderson, A.
