Mayor Buys First Poppy

At 7 o'clock Friday morning a young army will take possession of the streets of Medford. It will be an army mobilized in the cause of veteran welfare. Its attack on the generous pocketbooks of Medford residents will be in behalf of disabled veterans of the American wars, and of the widows and orphans of America's war dead.

The 13th annual sale of Buddy Poppies, sponsored through the United States by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will be conducted here by Crater Lake Post No. 1833. Dean K. Stacey is sales chairman, assisted by the members of the 1934 Poppy committee, of which Lillian K. Fynn is chairman.

Under this committee has been assembled a force of volunteer workers who will cover the city tomorrow with thousands of little red flowers which memorialize the fields of Flanders, and America's participation in the world war.

Each flower on sale tomorrow will bear a small green label designating it as a genuine Buddy Poppy. Work, in conjunction with the approach of Memorial day. Similarly, approximately 3,000 V. F. W. posts throughout the United States are sponsoring Buddy Poppy sales this month. The activity is the organization's principal means of obtaining funds for its welfare and relief work.

SAFeway COOKING EXPERT BORROWS FOREIGN RECIPES

Proprietors of Medford's unusual eating places, particularly restaurants of foreign extraction whose dishes are typical of a specific nationality, may have a well-known visitor to this city as their guest next week.

For, like the proverbial motorman who takes a street car ride on his day off, Miss Estelle Calkins makes her profession her hobby. Miss Calkins, one of the best-known home economists in the west, will be here next week to conduct the Safeway Stores Homemakers' bureau's course in "Kitchening," which opens at the Rialto theater on Tuesday, May 29, for a three-day period. And wherever she goes, it has been revealed by Mrs. Julia Lee Wright, national director of the bureau, Miss Calkins makes it a practice to frequent foreign cafes in search of foods new to the majority of American palates. Moreover, she doesn't hesitate, when she comes upon a dish unusually palatable, to make inquiry as to its recipe, even to the point of invading the kitchen and talking things over with the chef.

According to Miss Calkins, her interest in foreign dishes began when, as a very small child, a playmate of hers whose grandmother was a native of Sweden, introduced her, perhaps surreptitiously, to a recipe for certain Swedish cookies, in their completed form. Then and there, Miss Calkins determined that if such good things could come out of Sweden, Sweden and other countries, might hold similar delights for a taster brought up on a strictly American diet. At first, in typical childish craving for sweets, Miss Calkins' curiosity was satisfied with Danish and French pastries and sweet things of German descent. As she grew older, however, she turned gradually to the more substantial

DISHES UNTIL, ATTAINING MATURITY, HER HOBBY GREW TO ITS PRESENT PROPORTIONS.

While she has been at it for a number of years she claims that her interest, rather than lessening, is growing. At Oregon State College, where she completed her education in home economics, Miss Calkins enjoyed having a Chinese girl in her home-management house prepare regular Chinese meals, one of her favorite dishes being Eggs Foo Yung, an omelette made with crab meat, chopped pepper and onion, without, Miss Calkins laughs, such accepted Chinese delicacies as cats. Another of her favorite foreign dishes is Russian vegetable soup, made with bits of meat and vegetables and with beet juice, and served with a gravy boat of soured cream, mixed with egg and whipped to provide a dressing for the soup.

"It is surprising," says Miss Calkins, "how many foreign dishes, which really do not sound appetizing, when the recipe is given, are truly delicious, even to the taste, which is accustomed to commonplace American things only. If American housewives would take the trouble to look into foreign cookery a little, they would discover many delightful things. As a matter of fact, several of the recipes which will be demonstrated in the course of 'Kitchening' are of definitely foreign extraction, carefully tested and sometimes revised in the kitchen of the homemakers' bureau. We of the bureau do hope that everyone who can possibly do so will be on hand for all three days of 'Kitchening,' for we feel that we have something of real value to offer."

Deschutes Timber Swept By Flames

BEND, Ore., May 24.—(AP)—Approximately 150 acres of forest land was swept by two forest fires which raged through the timberlike Deschutes woods before they were brought within control late yesterday. Crews were kept on the fire line, however, in case of another flare-up. Forest service workers were aided by boys from the Elk Lake CCC camp.

BABY ELKS RIDE GOAT TONIGHT

A large class of candidates will "ride the goat"—or whatever it is new members ride—in the Elks club initiatory ceremony to be conducted at the lodge tonight. In addition to the "baby" Elks entering the local fraternal organization, a large number of local residents will join by demit from other Elks lodges. Past Exalted Ruler C. Y. Tengwald will have charge of the initiation.

The ancient and honorable order of "buckhounds" was reported last evening to be cooking up a special dose of misery as a special initiation rite for the neophytes. P. C. Big-ham will climax the evening with a generous "Dutch" lunch. At a meeting of the picnic committee last night it was definitely decided to go ahead with the picnic at the Elks camp ground on Rogue River May 29, and plans were laid for one of the best open-air get-togethers in the history of Medford Elksdom.
