WORLD RECIPES TO BE FEATURED IN SCHOOL HERE

Recipes from 'round the world. Recipes so old that they are new! Recipes so new that no local table has yet been graced with them! And each recipe simple and inexpensive, yet wholly delicious!

This, in short, is what is promised to the housewives in the Gateway Stores Homemakers' bureau course in "Kitcheneering" which opens a three-day session on Tuesday, May 29, at the Rialto theatre with 2 o'clock set as starting time, doors to be opened at 1 o'clock.

According to advices received from Mrs. Julia Lee Wright, national director of the bureau, each of the three days will feature one type of food preparation, but not to the exclusion of all others, each program being carefully planned to provide the utmost interest.

Coming here as Mrs. Wright's personal representative to conduct the cooking school after years of experience and weeks of special preparation on "Kitcheneering's" 1934 edition is Mrs. Estelle Calkins. Pitted not only by university training in home economics, but by a background of practical work in this field as well as by home-making of her own, Mrs. Calkins has come to be looked upon by her contemporaries as one of the outstanding home-economists of the West.

In the words of Mrs. Wright, "Miss Estelle Calkins combined the view of the youthful enthusiasm with the mellowing influence of experience. Since her graduation from Oregon State college, where she was granted both Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees in home economics, she has not only enjoyed the responsibilities of maintaining her own home, but she has added to her training and her own domestic life the invaluable knowledge that comes from public contacts in home economics work. We are very proud indeed to have such a young woman as a member of our staff, and we believe that the housewives of Medford will be able to profit greatly from the inspiring course she is bringing and will, in addition, enjoy her fascinating method of presentation to the utmost."

Miss Calkins is a newcomer to the staff of the Homemakers' bureau, and was chosen by Mrs. Wright out of many applicants for the position on the basis of her experience, her many qualifications and her standing among the leaders in the home economics field. Her past record includes the directorship of the Home Management House at Oregon State college, the directing of the Commons at Humboldt State Teachers college at Arcata, California, and a varied additional experience as a teacher of dietetics and home-making. She is holder of the Dietetics certificate for Seattle hospitals.

"I thought a former service man should be entitled to some consideration from his state government.

"When the state board on affairs finally put me on as janitor, they said it was until 'something better turns up.' I'm still at it."

The other station is now being erected at 800 East Main street.

The construction work in this city alone will cost in excess of $25,000, according to Mr. Carper and will be followed by further expansion later in the year.

"This ambitious program is in line with the very substantial increase in business noted by our company during the past few months," W. F. Carper said yesterday. "It may be considered our expression of confidence in the future of this fine section of the state of Oregon."

CHICAGO, May 26.—(AP)—The Chicago world's fair, in glittering new dress, opened its return engagement today.

Revamped and refurbished, the 1934 edition of the Century of Progress Exposition presented a new wonderland of shining buildings, landscaped villages, placid lagoons and soaring fountains. Buildings which last year were resplendent by night under the glare of colored lights, now drab by day, sparkled in festive coats of varicolored paints. New spires and towers broke the horizon, formerly severe with modernistic curves and angles.

Fair officials predicted the opening day crowd would exceed that of last year.
