

Beautiful and Substantial Homes Among Medford's Chief Amenity

Pride of home ownership is a distinct trait among Medford citizens and as a result a very large portion of the residences in the city are occupied by the owners, who take an owner's satisfaction in keeping their property in best of condition. On this page are shown a number of typical substantial homes in the city.

PIONEER PARADE THURSDAY TO BE JUBILEE FEATURE

Two-Mile Pageant Will Unfold Story of Oregon — Gov. Meler to Lead Procession — Colvig Marshal

Oregon's early history, colored with the heroism of the early pioneers, will be unfolded in lavish detail on the streets of Medford Thursday morning, June 7, when the Pioneer Parade is presented as an important feature of the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

The events which led up to Oregon's official recognition as a state will be reproduced in one of the most novel historical parades ever staged in the northwest.

More than 200 horses, hundreds of men and scores of wagons will stretch for more than two miles as the parade gets underway. Thousands of onlookers will line the downtown streets to see the great spectacle.

Governor to Lead

Governor Julius L. Meler, first citizen of the state, will lead the main-moth parade accompanied by the Rosarians, Portland's colorful marching organization.

Judge Colvig will follow as grand marshal, accompanied by Major Clare H. Armstrong and Carl Janouch as aides.

They will be followed by a life and drum corps, with Oregon's "Queen Mother," Anne Whiteaker, appearing in a liveried coach.

Then will come the floats and marching groups symbolizing the events of early Oregon history. First will be a "Stone Age" float descriptive of the pre-historic events which moulded the state and gave Oregon its great natural wonders. This float will be guarded by 12 Cavemen from Grants Pass.

The formal discovery of Mount Hood, Oregon's highest mountain, in 1792 will be portrayed, together with Captain Gray's discovery of the Columbia river and the coming of the early fur traders.

The Lewis and Clark expedition, with its 48 white men, one colored servant and the Indian girl, Sacajawes, will be presented, together with a replica of the salt cairn established on the Oregon coast by the explorers.

Indians in Line

A party of 24 Indians on ponies obtained for the jubilee by Captain Ace Renner, will be next in the line and will be followed by a float portraying the part played in early Oregon affairs by Dr. John McLoughlin.

A lone trapper will be next seen, and behind him will come a standard bearer carrying the Boston circular of 1832 for emigrants to the Oregon territory.

Oregon's first school will be shown, followed by the Methodist missionaries to the Oregon territory, and the Catholic missionaries. The early circuit riders will appear and behind them will come agents circulating prospective emigrants with information on the newly discovered Oregon country. Dr. Whitman, early missionary, will be seen.

Then will come the first great wagon train from the middle west to the territory. This will involve scores of horses, wagons and men and will include "Spec" O'Donnell, film actor, as a mounted scout.

As a brief interlude in the historical parade, Whipple's children's band will follow on an old-fashioned band wagon drawn by horses.

First Governor Portrayed

The first provisional governor will be portrayed, together with a troop of Oregon Rangers. The first newspaper will appear. Then, as another interlude, the Yreka drum corps will parade by.

The shipment of fruit trees to Oregon will be shown, the trees being freighted by ox team. Discovery of gold on the coast by an Oregon miner will be demonstrated, followed by the Pony Express riders and a troupe of old-time fiddlers.

The first Oregon territorial governor will appear, followed by old-time relics. Then will come mining floats, whipsaws, pack trains of burros, a four-horse stage coach, floats depicting early agriculture, another stage coach, floats showing the early home life in the state, and a series of old-time vehicles.

Then will come Sams Valley float, Indian drag poles, the early Jacksonville fire department, an old hotel bus, more vehicles, a Good Hill mining float, a float showing early broom making, a salmon float, an early photograph gallery, Crater Lake, more old vehicles, and the Elks' band on a real old-time band wagon.

The first governor will follow and behind him will come an "Oregon" float symbolic of the great commonwealth's establishment. The high school band will formally close the parade.

WILSON RECALLS JACKSONVILLE AS MINERS KNEW IT

Oregon's Diamond Jubilee celebration will have more than ordinary significance for Jesse W. Wilson, 86-year-old pioneer resident of Jackson county who came to Oregon the year the territory became a state.

Wilson was 12 years of age when he came to Oregon with his parents in 1859 and after two years spent in the Willamette valley, he moved to Jackson county. He saw Medford grow up and remembers Jacksonville of the early days as a "more than lively" town.

Wilson herded sheep where Medford now stands.

Was Dispatch Rider

He carried dispatches on horseback over the Greenspring mountain during the Modoc war. There were no roads then and during the winter time the snow was four feet deep in places. He forded streams where the ice was so thick it cut his horse's legs.

Wilson was hired by the Jackson county sheriff, Wesley Manning, to carry dispatches from Jacksonville to Port Willow Creek, Cal., on Klamath Lake, he relates. He changed horses only once, at Klamath Falls, and had a hot meal there.

with four white feet. His name was have any like him these days," says Wilson. "He was a chestnut sorrel with four white feet. His name was Kyrat."

After the war Wilson saw five warriors hanged — Captain Jack, the leader; Scorchon, Bogus Story, and two others whose names he does not recall.

Teamed Over Region

"I teamed all over this state country when a young man. I drove four and six-horse teams hauling freight from Crescent City to Jacksonville and from Roseburg to Redding and Klamath Falls. Yes, I went over the Crater Lake highway when it was just a narrow road," he says.

In later years, Wilson settled down to farming. Four years ago he lost his right leg and hasn't been so active since, but he still enjoys the best of health. He celebrated his 86th birthday March 25. He makes his home with his eldest daughter, Mrs. Amy Linderwood, at Jacksonville.

First Football Victim

RIO HONDO, Tex. (UP)—Football has claimed its first victim of the year in this section. Frederick Dale Hoover, 16, died of an infection started from a scratch received in spring practice at the high school here.

Rhode Island Bees Hit

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (UP)—Rhode Island's bee population was depleted by approximately 100,000,000 during the rigorous winter. And so the Rhode Island Bee Keepers' association arranged to "import" 1,000 pounds of bees by motor truck from Georgia.

Important Announcement!

IT IS generally conceded that the California Fruit Exchange is the largest factor in deciduous fruits on the Pacific Coast. Their Blue Anchor Brand is more widely known than any other pear brand in America. In British Columbia the Associated Growers of B. O. pack under the O. K. Brand. They handle approximately half the tonnage of that province.

These two firms, among others, handle their export business to the United Kingdom exclusively through The Fruit and Produce Exchange of Great Britain, Ltd., London, who have numerous branches throughout the British Isles. This firm enjoys the confidence of the buying trade to the astounding extent that for the past six years they have handled annually about one-eighth of all the fruit which arrived in the United Kingdom.

The Pacific Coast representatives of The Fruit and Produce Exchange of Great Britain are Duthie and Company, located in the Terminal Sales Building, Portland, Oregon.

French importers who during the last season took over four hundred cars from the Pacific Northwest, including many cars of Medford pears, have just chosen Duthie and Company as their representative.

Duthie and Company hope to expand the Medford pear and apple business on an FAS basis to a large extent this season, not only in the United Kingdom and France, but into Germany, Holland and other countries.

Guy W. Conner, Inc., feel that their selection by Duthie and Company as their Medford representatives is a distinct honor which will augment greatly the Guy W. Conner, Inc., FOB and FAS business.

Guy W. Conner, Inc., will be glad to explain more in detail the extent of the facilities which they offer to the shippers and growers of the Rogue River Valley.
