

PIONEER MOTHERS GIVEN TRIBUTE AT JUBILEE SERVICES

Rev. Ferguson Praises Uncrowned Queens—Names Many Prominent Pioneer Women Oregon Territory

Paying homage to the uncrowned queens of Oregon, many of whom he named and told of their work which has made this western country outstanding, Rev. D. J. Ferguson of Astoria last night addressed an audience of nearly two thousand at the religious services of the Oregon Diamond Jubilee.

The services, presided over by Rev. William J. Howell, pastor of the Methodist Presbyterian church, opened with all singing "America" and "Onward Christian Soldiers." The invocation was given by Rev. N. D. Wood of the Methodist church, south of Medford, after which Capt. R. G. Durham of the Salvation Army read the scripture lesson, taken from the book of Leviticus.

Over 150 in Choir The large choir of over 150 voices, directed by Mrs. Elsie Carleton Strang, and accompanied by the Elks band under the direction of F. Wilson Wait, then sang "Gloria" by Mozart, and Rev. M. L. Edwards of the First Presbyterian church in Ashland offered prayer.

"The Heavens Are Telling" was sung by the choir, accompanied by the band. Sidney Hall of the Ashland First Methodist church then introduced Dr. Ferguson, who said that he would emphasize the women of Oregon in his talk. He mentioned Eve, Rachel, Ruth and Solomon's proverb about women, in the Bible, but said there were many, not all of the pre-historic era, who had been outstanding.

"I firmly believe Oregon is the greatest state in the Union, Rev. Ferguson said. "I had the privilege of nominating Julius Meier at the independent convention in Portland. I have no regrets, but I'm glad he's going to retire."

Pioneers of Sturdy Stock He spoke of the enterprise and the audacity of the people who resided on the Clyde river in Scotland and, who built the ship, the Columbia. He referred to the two men who returned to Europe on consultation concerning the Louisiana purchase, saying such people were characteristic of Oregon's early settlers.

"Then came Lewis and Clark, showing the audacity of the American engineers in the military department, and giving life to the story that only jack rabbits and sagebrush could live in the west."

He went on to tell of the Astoria settlement where the salt cairns are located, and, being president of the chamber of commerce in that city, invited his listeners to come to Astoria to view the great cairns.

Guest of Astor "In 1881, John Jacob Astor came to Oregon," and Rev. Ferguson recalled being the guest of Lord and Lady Astor in London two years ago. "I felt that, through them, I had a direct connection with John Jacob Astor, who founded the city of Astoria."

Sacajawea, the Indian maiden who led the Lewis and Clark expedition, was also mentioned, and Dr. Ferguson told of the seamanship, the exploration and the development of commerce by the people of that time who came to this territory.

Pioneers of the religious world were also taken into consideration, and the Methodist, Presbyterian, Quakers and Jesuits were among those first bringing religion to the new country, he said.

Oregon Mighty Commonwealth "Oregon," declared Dr. Ferguson, "is the mightiest commonwealth in America. Its expansion is limitless—beyond computation. If there is any spot on the world's surface greater than the mighty plains of Oregon, then it is yet to be discovered."

"Everything lies here. Scenery, a wonderful playground and national resources, the greatest commonwealth in America. Limitations of a short life, the same bearing in all nations of the world, is the only disadvantage. Oregon has given to the world the greatest men and women that were ever known."

"There is none now, with more audacity and American spirit, and no women that stand, or can be, higher than three or four of the type of Jane Addams," the most remarkable—Helen Keller.

Tribute to Education Reference was made to the voting of the Oregon territory into the United States rather than a part of the British empire, and the early establishment of schools here. Dr. Ferguson declared: "There is no tribute too great to the spirit of education."

day in the bodies of their descendants." Names Many "Queens" In his review of "uncrowned queens," Rev. Ferguson told of the first white woman to become a wife and mother in the Oregon country. She was Anna Maria Pittman Lee, wife of Jason Lee, who was also the first white woman to give her body as well as her life to the state of Oregon.

"Mrs. Caroline Couch, who came to Oregon by the Panama route in 1852, was the first woman to vote in a school election in the city of Portland. It is said that the men removed their hats in respect as she deposited her ballot."

"Abigail Scott Duniway is a name that shines in the story of woman's rights and the fight for right and equality on the part of women and mothers in the story of human freedom," he said. Narcissa Prentiss Whitman is another princess of the early life of the northwest and Oregon, wife of the great Marcus Whitman. She lost her first baby and became a mother to all, taking numerous orphans into her home to care for them.

Sisters Start Education "The first permanent work in education," Dr. Ferguson declared, "belongs to the sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary, coming from Montreal by way of Cape Horn in 1859. Mrs. W. H. Gray, with a gifted voice, was a great worker in the missionary cause of Oregon, and was a charter member of the Clatsop Plains church. She is remembered in the memorial church on Clatsop plains by the thoughtfulness of her daughter, Mrs. Kamm."

"Dr. Owens Adair was a pioneer in Oregon and in the medical world, her teachings slowly being adopted by all the world."

Prominent in Oregon Numerous other pioneer women were mentioned by him, and included Mrs. John Minto, Mrs. Clinton Kelly, Charlotte Moffet Cartwright, a daughter of the Terwilligers who had the first house in Portland in 1845, the city being founded in 1874. Mary B. Pinkham and Rebecca Clawson, who were pastors of the Friends church; Mrs. Sarah Hopper Lee, Helen F. Spalding, Mrs. Wynn Going, Mrs. Narcissa White Kinney, Mrs. Catherine A. Coburn, Mrs. Francis Killin, Mrs. Kate Martin Slocum, Mary G. LaFollet, Sarah Owens, Dian Owens Hobson, Mrs. Haines and Mrs. Kent were all named.

Of the Astoria pioneers, he spoke of Eliza and Sophie Boelling, and the late Mary Flavel.

"The last of the pioneers of the wagon train of 1844 was laid to rest in Portland Sunday—Mrs. Alva Perkins Russell. Another interesting character was Mrs. Mary Lleneuwer, daughter of J. P. Powers, the last surviving member from Clatsop plains and a charter member of the first church west of the Rockies in the Protestant world."

Dr. John Porter Powell crossed the plains in 1852, and settled in what is known as Powell's valley, 12 miles from Portland.

Ideals Still Live "I am under no illusions about the world at the present time," declared Dr. Ferguson, who, referring to Oregon, said: "Here God has dedicated His noblest ideals. God bless the immortal workers who have made us what we are!"

"We have happy memories of those we fraternize with and have with us—who have made Oregon what it is today." In closing he said: "May God Almighty perpetuate their memory, handiwork and generations forever. To Oregon's mothers, all hail, forever and ever. Amen."

In the name of the jubilee committee, Rev. Howell thanked Dr. Ferguson for his address, and also extended the thanks of the committee to Mr. Wait, Mrs. Strang, the Elks' band and the choir.

Rev. John T. LaRose, pastor of the Nazarene church, offered prayer, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Ernest A. Oldenburg of Medford. The services closed with the coronation hymn.

Ralph Gorton Jubilee Visitor Ralph Gorton of Portland, formerly with radio station KMED here, is a visitor in in Medford this week to attend the Oregon Diamond Jubilee celebration.

While in Medford, Mr. Gorton is promoting the sale of home draft beer dispensers, on which he has the patent, he said today.

BIRTHS Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pasley of Twin Falls, Idaho, are the parents of a daughter, named Florence Belle, born May 20, according to announcements received in Medford. Mrs. Pasley is remembered here as the former Mildred Lawrence.
