Milk Made Municipal Monopoly in Rome

Governor of Eternal City Sets Price as Bottles Supplant Hand Carts

By ANDRUE BERDING ROME.-(AP)-Wine is giving way to milk on the tables of Romans owing to the development of the finest milk plant in Europe and one of the best in the world, as Dr. Robert Stanley Breck, world-known milk bacteriologist of Geneva, N. Y., characterized it recently while in this city.

Similar establishments are operating in Milan and Naples.

The Rome plant, which has been in operation only two years, is "different" because it is:

1-A municipal monopoly operated by a consortium of 681 milk producers under contract with the governor of Rome.

2-It is not subject to the law of supply and demand but sets its price in agreement with the governor so as to give the producers a fair return on their investment and work.

3-It takes care of the collection of the milk from the producers, the pasteurizing, bottling and distribution to the dealers who deliver to the consumer at fixed prices.

4-It gathers milk exclusively from dairy farms built on the reclaimed swamp land around Rome.

American tourists who stopped in Rome several years ago saw little hand-propelled milk carts trundled about the streets of the capital by municipal employes. The "milkman" carried a high-pitched cressent horn. Every 10 feet he would stop and blow piercingly. Windows opened. Down came buckets on strings, with a few copper coins in the bottom of the bucket. The milkman laded into them the milk called for by the coppers.

Home Acquires Hygiene All that is gone. The "Milk Central," as it is called, began to rise. The most modern machinery was installed the most hygienic methods employed.

Inspectors were sent out to instruct milk producers in the latest scientific methods. Systems of check-up on the good or bad performance of the farmers were started.

Residents of Rome then for the first time made the acquaintance of milk bottles.

A trip through the milk plant today shows 500 employees, mostly girls, handling the various processes.

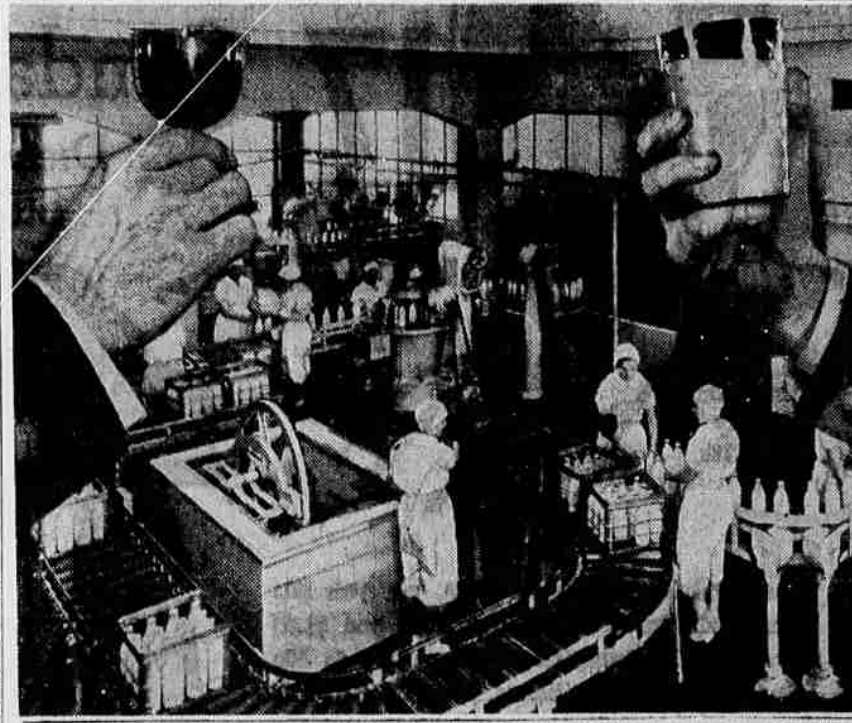

The sanitary and bacteriological control is rigid. Form letters are sent out if the milk comes in with sediment in the cans, if it is deficient in fat content, if it contains too many germs, if it shows that the cows are ill.

Small Cows Cut Price Three offenses pass with warnings, the fourth brings a fine, and successive offenses may bring suspension.

The total cost of handling the milk, including the amortization of the plant capital in 15 years, is 21 centesimi, or about 2 cents a quart. Dr. Breck said this was a remarkably low figure. Milk sells in Rome for 1.50 lire, or about 11.5 cents a quart.

Per Capita Consumption Low The immediate effect of the Milk Central has been a decided increase in consumption. Residents of the Eternal City are turning from their table wine to milk.

In 1930 cows supplying Rome numbered 18,000. In February of this year there were 23,375. Consumption

Romans are being taught to drink milk in place of their traditional table wine, now that the city exercises a monopoly on the lactical fluid supply. The "Milk Central," a modern pasteurizing and bottling plant, sees that householders get a pure product for 11.5 cents a quart.

tion in the metropolitan area the year before the Milk Central went into operation was 118,061 quarts a day. In the first six months of the fiscal year 1933-34 this rose to 135,200 quarts.

This figure, however, is still low when one considers that the population of Rome is 1,050,000.

The progress realized in Rome is reflected in other Italian cities. Milan has a Milk Central, and in that city the consumption is higher than in the capital.
