

ADVOCATES OF 13 MONTH CALENDAR HIT SEAMAN SNAG

Naval Observatory Expert Against New Division of Year—Only Benefit Lawyers, Accountants, Claim

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The 13-month calendar advocates have run into some major opposition from the director of the United States Naval Observatory, a sea-captain-scientist, who believes that any radical calendar changes will be costly to American business and cause endless confusion.

Such a calendar even would be tougher on seamen, would complicate their work and might even jeopardize their safety, in the opinion of Capt. J. P. Hellweg, whose duty it is to determine the time by celestial observations and broadcast it daily, accurate to the fraction of a second.

Vigorous Campaign The 13-month advocates have been campaigning vigorously for their calendar. Their 12-month opponents have battled just as strenuously. They insist that the 12-month calendar has worked fairly well for a good many years now, and that any revision should be slight to prevent chaos following any exaggerated change.

The World Calendar association, of which Captain Hellweg is a member, proposes that the first month of each quarter, January, April, July and October, shall have 31 days and that all other months shall have 30. Each quarter would have 91 days. That would leave an extra day at the end of the year, which would be a holiday. On leap years there would be another holiday, immediately after June 30.

Business Aid The captain believes that the simplified calendar would aid in the conduct of business and still not complicate astronomy and navigation, nor throw the regular succession of holidays, religious and otherwise, out of gear.

The 13-month calendar, on the other hand, has so many disadvantages, according to Captain Hellweg, that it wouldn't benefit anyone, with the possible exception of lawyers and accountants, who might be busy untangling business litigation. History shows, he says, that after the change to the Gregorian calendar in England, more than one-third of all litigation for the ensuing 70 years, resulted from the change.

The number "13" in the first place, he continues, is against the 13-month calendar. It is a clumsy number, difficult to use in division, and unlucky, in the opinion of large sections of the population. Captain Hellweg says he doesn't think that people who steer clear of "13" all their lives would find much happiness using a calendar which would force "13" on them for a whole month every year.

Mother and Son to Graduate GLOUCESTER, Ohio.—(UP)—Mrs. Phena Householder and her son, Wilbur, who entered high school together four years ago, were members of the graduating class of Jackson-Tribble high school there. They completed the same course with similar grades.

Chief Fire Engine Driver NAUGATUCK, Conn.—(UP)—Borough officers appointed Milton Garvin chief of the fire department and then named him a driver of apparatus so he could draw a salary. The chief's job carries no pay. Now he'll receive $1.87 a year.

Cat Mother of Siamese Twins KNOXVILLE, Iowa.—(UP)—A cat owned by George Johnson, a coal miner here, recently gave birth to Siamese quadruplet kittens. The four kittens are fastened together by living tissue. A fifth kitten, born at the same time, is normal.
