ROBLES KIDNAPING CLUE GAINED FROM YOUTH IN CUSTODY

LA JUNTA, Colo., June 27.—(AP) A R. Gear, federal department of justice agent, announced today after questioning Don Rodriguez, 23, held for investigation in the kidnaping of seven-year-old June Robles of Tucson, Ariz., that he gained information which will result in further investigation of the case.
Gear, who questioned Rodriguez, said he cannot disclose the information he obtained but that it definitely is worth following up.
It was intimated the investigation will turn to Tucson where June Robles was kidnaped in April, and that probably a federal agent or a man from the sheriff's office here may be sent to Tucson. In the meantime authorities here have asked Tucson officials to check certain angles of the kidnaping, they said.
Rodriguez was arrested here several days ago on a charge of attempted robbery. Statements he made to a fellow prisoner caused officials to consider his possible knowledge of the Robles case.

Petro declared he had been slugged and taken to the Central Labor temple here, where for two hours he underwent questioning and threats by men whom he charged were members of the International Longshoremen's association.

Slugged on Street
Finally released, he said, he started walking toward the city center when he felt a heavy blow on the head. Another blow felled him and he was kicked repeatedly. As a deputy sheriff approached his two assailants fled.

Petro was taken immediately before the Multnomah county grand jury to testify to the assault and abduction. The grand jury already is in session to hear evidence on other attacks of similar nature.

Over the signature of Conrad Negstad, president, and Charles G. Peabody, secretary, of the Portland local of the International Longshoremen's union, a statement was issued today bitterly assailing Mayor Joseph K. Carson for his stand on the strike controversy.

"By your connivance, your authority, your consent and your approval," the statement to the mayor said, "the stage is set in Portland for bloodshed and civil war."

An unemployed man entered a New York apartment, made a sandwich, bathed, washed his underwear, lay down for a nap and was found asleep when the apartment's tenant returned.
