CAPITAL GIRLS OFFER TIPS ON BEACH WEAR

If you want to be in the swim when you go to the beach this summer here are a few suggestions on what to wear. These bright new togs were exhibited at a Washington fashion show by a quartet of prominent capital girls. Left to right: Helen Tewksbury, Janie McSwain, daughter of Rep. John J. McSwain of South Carolina; Betty Lawrence, and Janet Sheppard, daughter of Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas. (Associated Press Photo)

DROUGHT FORCES REVISION IN FARM AID PLANS

The prolonged and widespread drought forced administration leaders at Washington to revise plans to help western farmers meet dry weather losses. Shown here are Chester C. Davis (left), farm administrator, and Victor A. Christgau, assistant administrator, studying a map on which is outlined the vast acreage included in the wheat reduction campaign. It was decided to extend the deadline for signing wheat reduction contracts so growers affected by the drought might still take advantage of benefit payments offered under the program. Wins $152,000

Alma Mamay, former Ziegfeld chorus girl, won $152,000 in the Irish Hospital sweepstakes, but she declined to talk about it! She held a ticket on Windsor Lad, winner of the famous Epsom derby. (Associated Press Photo)

MARIE DRESSLER, NOTED ACTRESS, IN BATTLE TO REGAIN HEALTH

Marie Dressler, one of the great character actresses of stage and screen, is seriously ill at Santa Barbara, Cal., from a complication of illnesses, including heart and kidney ailments. At an isolated estate, only a few visitors are permitted to see her. Miss Dressler, who first appeared on the stage in 1886 and began her film career in 1914, is shown at left in roles during the early part of her movie career. At right are two of the characters she portrayed after her successful comeback to the screen a few years ago. In the center she is shown in a recent portrait. (Associated Press Photos)

CLEVELAND GAS STATION STRIKERS FORM 'BLOCKADE'

This is how striking gas station employees in Cleveland gathered around stations which attempted to open for business. Many motorists' gasoline tanks ran dry as only a few independent stations were able to sell gas, and many places had a limited supply. A truce was reached. (Associated Press Photo)

DUST STORM OBSCURES CHICAGO SKYSCRAPERS

Dust blown from drought areas of the Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa enveloped Chicago's downtown area and gave a twilight appearance to the "loop" in midday. Here is a view looking east along the Chicago river at a time when the wind's velocity approached 100 miles an hour. (Associated Press Photo)

BRASS RAIL STAGES COMEBACK IN NEW YORK

Perpendicular drinking is legal again in New York but persons with feet itching for the feel of the brass rail staged no rush to bars when they started sipping across the mahogany. The cameraman, however, caught these five as they were downing their drinks upright. The result is a study of foot postures on the rail. (Associated Press Photo)

PLAN TRIP TO HAWAII IN YAWL

Three Alameda, Cal., youths have completed preparations for an attempted cruise to Honolulu in a 26-foot yawl, Sally (lower). The craft has a canvas spread of 325 feet and a one-cylinder engine for auxiliary power. The trio who will make the attempt are (upper, left to right) William Whalen, 19; Jack Blinn, 22, and Edward Hales, 19. (Associated Press Photos)

500,000 KIDS JAM WORLD'S FAIR

On the hottest May day in Chicago's weather annals, an estimated 500,000 children swarmed into the World's Fair to celebrate "children's day" at the exposition. About 100,000 "crashed the gate" and nearly 250, injured, were treated at hospitals. Here is a view of the crowd near Enchanted Island, the center of entertainment for youngsters at the fair.
