ORLEANS MAYOR DEFIES KINGFISH AND GUARDSMEN

Long, self-styled "Kingfish," moved about like a war general, "commanding" 500 national guardsmen mobilized at Jackson Barracks on the edge of the city.

The embattled Walmsey, once a friend of Long, held 400 policemen in readiness to resist any possible attempt of Long to usurp the city police power.

Almost two score militiamen held the city registration voting office which they stormed Monday night. Machine guns larked from the windows across a narrow street toward city hall.

Gov. O. K. Allen's proclamation of partial martial law, applying to the city hall area, continued in effect.

Factions Mutter Ward and precinct leaders of both factions muttered. Ordinary citizens stared wide-eyed at the fully armed state soldiers in the voting office. Some stopped to laugh and joke with the guardsmen.

Mayor Walmsey and Senator Long lashed each other over the radio last night.

The whole affair pointed to the coming congressional election in September, in which Walmsey and Long are supporting rival candidates.

Along with that issue was Long's announced determination to clean up the "vice and corruption" in the city, which Walmsey interpreted as a ruse for Long to seize control of the New Orleans administration.

The main point at issue today revolved about the new police board authorized at the recent Long-controlled legislative session to take the police power away from Mayor Walmsey.

den, and narrow escapes are recorded daily from fast driving and utter disregard of others. Several near auto crashes have been reported as occurring at Jackson street and North Central avenue.

Personable Rascal

Drama, comedy and romance are all found in "Bedside," which opens the double feature program at the Studio theater. The plot concerns a personable rascal who masquerades as a famous surgeon after having been expelled from medical school for too much attention to wine, women and cards.

A world-wide upheaval is shown in "Deluge," the second film.

In Caterian Role

With Ann Harding in the title role and John Boles playing the male lead, "The Life of Vergie Winters" comes to the screen of the Craterian theater for today and tomorrow, as a vivid dramatization of the widely acclaimed story by Louis Bromfield.

"Vergie Winters" realistically pictures the poignant romance of a gallant woman who dares to follow her own heart and her own ideals in defiance of small town gossip and persecution. Her great love, with its stolen moments of happiness and its hours of heartache is traced through a period of 22 years. The story covers the period from 1910 to 1932, and the various styles, slang expressions, and modes of living are reflected in the costumes, dialogues, settings and characterizations.

Damon Runyan Hit On Rialto's Bill

With both "Midnight Alibi" and "Manhattan Love Song" on the same program at the Rialto theater, it is hard to say which is receiving the most praise. Both features come in for a large share.

"Midnight Alibi," written by Damon Runyan, who has already given us two fine screen stories in his "Lady for a Day" and "Lutie Stringer," has Richard Barthelmess in the leading role. Ann Dvorak and Helen Chandler are cast opposite Barthelmess for the romance, but a little old lady, Helen Lowell, almost walks away with the honors. She is the white-haired spinster friend of Barthelmess, a gun-toting gangster and the means to his getting out of the racket. Barthelmess plays a double role, that of the modern, up-to-date gangster and the part of the spinster's sweetheart of 45 years before the real story actually starts. When the modern gangster invades the old lady's home to avoid capture, he is met with a welcome that naturally surprises him, inasmuch as he knows nothing of her resemblance to the dead sweet-heart. A mutual understanding and sympathy springs up between the two, and when Barthelmess is arrested and tried for the murder of his sweetheart's brother, he not only saves his life, but unites him to his girl friend in an unusual twist that climaxes the story.

"Manhattan Love Song," the other feature on the program, is set against the background of luxurious penthouses and cheap burlesque shows. Robert Armstrong and Dixie Lee have the leading roles.
