

DROUGHT SHOWS NECESSITY FOR CONTINUING AAA

Secretary Wallace Defends Acreage Control Plans at Kentucky Farm Picnic — People Must Lend Aid

PADUCAH, Ky., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace said today that the drought showed the necessity for continuing agricultural adjustment rather than ending it.

Defending acreage control plans, he told an audience at a farm picnic that some critics are saying "that this drought proves the futility of attempting production control measures."

"If anything," Wallace said, "it proves that the contrary is true; for, as has been demonstrated by recent modifications in contractual agreements in our commodity programs, if forces over which men have no control intercept a plan of action and partially remove the cause, our program is sufficiently elastic to respond to that emergency by doing just what any practical, hard-working and level-headed farmer would do in such an emergency."

"It is possible to modify a flexible plan so that the net result of the program and the forces of nature will combine to achieve the result originally sought."

The AAA, he said "cannot operate effectively bringing new ideas to the farm people of this country unless they, themselves, throw their full weight into the traces. So far, farmers have responded magnificently. Their responsibility in the future is even more important."

He called country production control associations "one of the most significant social and economic developments which have come out of the agricultural adjustment experiment thus far" and declared his hope that in the future they would "provide an important new outlet for the energy, the planning and the inventiveness of the young men and women who are on the farm."

Foreign Outlet Lost
Long an advocate of low tariffs and an advocate of the new reciprocal tariff bargaining policy, Wallace attributed much of the predicament of Kentucky tobacco farmers to vanished foreign markets.

Foreign consumption of American tobacco declined as much as 75 per cent for some types, he said, adding "it remains to be seen just how much progress we can make during this year and next in regaining the lost foreign trade. It is much easier to develop nationalistic policies than it is to tear them down."

"We feel that some progress will be made, but in the meantime it appears that the same thing to do is to bring production to the level of consumption, so that a burdensome surplus may not depress prices."

WEST CANADA GRAIN SUFFERING FOR RAIN

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Yields of all grains in western Canada have been "severely reduced," a government crop report issued today said, adding that the decline will continue until there is heavy rain fall, for which there is little prospect within the next 48 hours.

Conditions for a large crop are not favorable in any part of Canada, the report stated.

"With generally high temperatures in the past fortnight," he said, "pastures, grain and root crops need more rain to prevent a decline in condition."
