GENERAL MARTIN STANDS READY TO HELP SO. OREGON

people of Oregon," General Martin stated, adding "What can I do for you when elected governor—for I am going to be elected. In the army they say morale is to the physical as three is to one. On our trip the people have come from along the highways and from small towns to meet me. America will be renewed along the country side.

"The administration," the congressman said, "has been very solicitous to all of you. You have received $164,000,000 and in income taxes, processing and other revenue, you have paid $10,000,000 which leaves the 16 to 1 ratio. The opposition complains about the money, but tell them to let the people back east worry about that.

"We come under the head of the forgotten state. This administration has done more for you than all the others since Oregon was made a state back in 1859.

"They have developed the Columbia river, irrigation projects, roads, and they have saved homes and farms. We have prepared Oregon for the great influx of people we feel sure are coming.

"Oregon is the finest place to live, if you could make a living here. Many have come, found it impossible, and have gone. But now the stage is set. When they come, we're going to keep them.

Cites Former Condition.

"Do you realize the conditions two weeks before the president was inaugurated?" the candidate asked. "One billion five hundred million dollars was withdrawn from the banks and hoarded — then all the banks were closed.

"Fortunately we elected a president who had courage to initiate a program which drew around it men trained in social and economic problems, to save our institution," he declared. "The previous administration was trying by psychology to get the people to believe they were not suffering. Always prosperity was around the corner—and we were on the brink of ruin."

The general related how 12 great experimental bills were put through within a month. "Not all of them will succeed, and the president said so when they were passed. We are exploring new fields and if they don't work, we'll withdraw them in July, 1935, for they are experiments. Those which prove of value will be re-enacted as permanent laws.

"For instance, the NRA needs revision. It is a fine piece of legislation, but needs some changes. It will be re-enacted. There is a third class that will not meet the test.

Not Special Legislation.

"This is not legislation for special people, but for the good of the average citizen—spread out evenly. Before, when one group got its share, the rest of the country could go hang. The rest of the people were on the sidelines looking on.

Irrigation and reclamation in southern Oregon were pointed out by Governor Martin as being helped by the new administration, and he told how government loans had been made in the valley, and how the funds had been cut down so the people could live on them, and make happy homes.

General Martin related how the cement plant at Gold Hill had been given a contract for the Bonneville dam, and reminded his hearers that the contracts had been given three firms in Oregon, instead of California.

The orchardists faced small prices, and it was impossible to get money from banks, the general said. When they did, the banks charged great rates of interest, and the orchardists were fortunate when the government could come to their rescue.

The price of gold being advanced by the administration aided the miners in the Jacksonville section, General Martin said.

Normalcy On Way.

Before, the farmers were begging congress to do something, but nothing could be done. When we consider how things are going now, frightful conditions in Europe, unfortunate strike after strike—I am not going to set a definite date—but in a year or so we will be back to the same sound prosperity.

"Not to the prosperity of 1928—God forbid! For that was a time when all spiritual values were forgotten. Everyone wanted to get a fortune immediately, and all, from the rich to the bootblack, were playing the market. The continuation of this spirit would have destroyed us as a people."

The general summed up the purpose of the administration to bring this country back to reasonable prosperity in which wealth will be more equitably distributed.

"Russia, Italy and Germany have lost their governments. They are ruled by dictators now, as their governments couldn't stand up under the strain. We, in this country, appreciate the fact this is the most precious civilization and must be preserved. We must enrich the spiritual life, with more ease, more education and more comfort for our people."

Reames Toastmaster.

R. O. Stephenson, chairman of the Jackson county Democratic committee, introduced Attorney A. E. Reames, who acted as toastmaster for the evening. Ormand Lipscomb, who accompanied General and Mrs. Martin to Medford, gave a short talk addressing the "Roosevelt citizens." He told how General Martin advocates Roosevelt policies and the new deal, "And in truth, and in fact, is recognized as the leader in the state of Oregon by President Roosevelt," he said.

"The Democratic party is extremely fortunate in being able to present a person of General Martin's type, as a candidate for governor. You as citizens should know what the Martin headquarters and campaign committee are trying to do.

He related how many prominent people throughout the state, who were not members of the Democratic party, had said "If the Democrats will nominate him, we will elect him." Said Mr. Lipscomb: "This is not a campaign of Democrats alone, but the ambitious citizens of Oregon. General Martin comes to you as a candidate for governor with every quality a man should have who aspires to so high an office.

Experienced Leader.

"He has experience, leadership, good judgment, character, and any man who becomes a major general in the army has accomplished no mean feat."

He told of the general's outstanding record in congress and said that the citizens of Oregon had never had a better opportunity to elect a man of such sterling character, honesty and manhood.

R. R. Turner of Dallas, Ore., candidate for congress from the first congressional district, on the Democratic ticket, was introduced by Mr. Reames also.
