SUBSTITUTE FOR CWA MAY BE USED IN WINTER RELIEF

Relief Problem Threatens to Take Major Attention — Upturn in Employment Fails to Make Appearance

By BYRON PRICE.
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The relief problem again is threatening to nose out all others in the scramble for attention at Washington.

Industrially, September has cast no convincing shadow before it. Cold figures do not promise, thus far, the really big employment upturn hoped for by the administration.

Some officials think relief expenditures during the coming winter may reach proportions entirely unforeseen a year ago.

Budget officers grow serious when they view the prospect. There is more and more talk that President Roosevelt may have to go even deeper into the red than he had planned.

As to relief methods, the administration merely is feeling its way, and probably will continue to do so for some weeks to come. A revival of CWA will be avoided if possible, although something very similar may be substituted.

Johnson Wanted to Quit.

Political implications adhere inevitably to almost every act and policy in Washington and the latest NRA-Johnson episode is no exception.

The truth is General Johnson wanted to quit, and almost everyone concerned felt he probably had completed the organization job for which he entered the government service.

It was one thing, however, for him to slip out naturally, and quite another, politically, for him to leave in a huff or under fire from within the administration.

This is a campaign year, and Democratic political chiefs knew an open break between Johnson and the White House would be widely interpreted as a repudiation of NRA itself.

Johnson, on his side, is reported half-willing to become a senatorial candidate in Oklahoma in 1936, opposing Senator Gore for renomination. He has no desire to make that race handicapped by a White House cold shoulder.

Perhaps these things had a greater influence than was generally realized in defeating the effort to eject the general forcibly — a development which completely changed the whole picture overnight.

Strike Cause Confused.

So much confusion and secrecy surrounded preparations for the textile strike that government conciliators were compelled to do a lot of shooting in the dark.

Some of the union demands, such as abolition of sweatshops and union recognition, were so elastic in meaning that it was hard to get at the real cause of the dispute.

The investigators found the trouble centered almost entirely in the south, where neither employers nor employes are familiar with the new unionized set-up inaugurated under NRA.

Underneath, the southern mill owners were accused of all sorts of "chiseling," including open discrimination against union men. The union leaders, in turn, were accused of inexperience and hot-headedness.

There was a feeling on the part of some New England and other northern owners and workers as well that such a situation would not have arisen in the long-unionized north, and that if it did, it speedily could have been adjusted.

The northerners on both sides agreed to go along, however, even if many of them did not fully understand. That made it all the harder for the government to get an agreement.

LAVA BEDS YIELD WAR MEMENTOS

MODOC LAVA BEDS NATIONAL MONUMENT, Calif.—(Spl.) Although souvenir hunters have been over the ground hundreds of times since the stirring days of the Modoc Indian war of 1873-1874, numerous mementos of the period when the Indians wandered over southern Oregon and northern California are still being found near the lava beds.

During the past month, Ranger Don C. Fisher, stationed at the monument, has found over 200 arrowheads, with some of the most perfect ever located in that section. The arrowheads, along with a large number of Indian mortars and pestles, are on display at Indian Well, lava beds headquarters. More exhibits for display purposes have been promised by persons who made such collections quite a number of years before the area had been visited by many people.

SEVERE SENTENCES OF OLDEN DAYS FAILED AS CURB FOR CRIMINALS

SUNBURY, Pa. (UP)—Old records at the Northumberland county court house attest to the severity of sentences imposed by the courts during the republic's infancy.

The case of Joe Disherry versus organized society indicates severe sentences were then, as now, not infallible in curbing crime.

Joe was the terror of the county, albeit he had a well-defined sense of humor. He wasn't particular about what he stole, but his favorite theft was food, cooked by himself in houses while the occupants were gone.

Finally the patience of authorities was exhausted. This sentence was imposed in September, 1784: "That the said Joseph Disherry receive 39 lashes between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock tomorrow; to stand in the pillory one hour; to have his ears cut off and nailed to the post; to return the property stolen, or the value thereof; remain in prison three months; pay a fine, etc."

Colonel Henry Antes, sheriff saw that the provisions of the sentence were executed.

Court records show that he was convicted four years later of robbing three houses, and sentenced to the penitentiary at Philadelphia.

A few years later he returned to Sunbury, still sticky fingered.

While robbing a mill in Union county he fell through a hatchway and suffered fatal injuries.

THE DALLES, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Two men who said they were Raleigh and Robert Hampton, brothers, of Portland, were each sentenced to a year in the state penitentiary today by Circuit Judge Hendricks of Sherman county following guilty pleas of the theft of wheat from Sherman county farmers.
