BREWERY TRUCKS ARE HIJACKED BY STRIKE PICKETS

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Pickets sent three trucks of the Northwest Brewing company temporarily out of service Sunday in the first violence of the Martinoff labor trouble here.

One driver was dragged from his truck of keg beer about 1 a. m. at the company's brewery here, and the truck driven by pickets to a nearby parking lot.

The other two trucks were stopped just outside the city limits, their drivers pulled out and replaced by pickets, who left the trucks in a downtown garage.

Harry Lasento, a driver for the company, told police he was stopped Sunday morning near the plant, warned not to drive a truck for the company again and struck in the face with a blackjack.

Late Saturday night, pickets are said to have forced a Northwest Brewery truck to leave a customer's place of business by threatening damage to the place of business if the vehicle was unloaded there.

Peter Martinoff, president of the Northwest Brewing company, has blamed picketing on a group of Seattle brewers who he says object to his price of jug beer.

CHIEF OFFICER SAYS FIRE WAS INCENDIARY JOB

"But the passengers were shouting and there was great confusion. Many of them wouldn't get into the lifeboats."

He testified the first word of the fire reached him at 2:45 a. m. (E. S. T.). An officer he sent to investigate turned a fire extinguisher on a locker and it "blew out," Warms said. A few minutes before three, he testified, he sounded a general alarm.

"I did all I could," he said. He added he ordered the crew turned out and ordered his pans be used if necessary to arouse the passengers.

Hoped to Control Fire.
The first wireless message, a "stand by" signal, went out about 3:15, Warms said, and the "S. O. S." about a minute later. He said he delayed sending a message because he thought he could control the fire.

Warms said there had been drinking parties in the lounge just before the fire, but as they were very common he thought there was nothing to be uneasy about.

Warms denied reports that lifeboats left the ship without orders. He said panic was created by passengers, many of whom refused to get into the lifeboats.

"I hollered 'For God's sake get into the boats,' and I saw a steward pick one girl up and forcibly put her in," Warms testified.

And officers and taking the personnel to vote on the measure.

Officers Oppose
They said the officers voted "no" overwhelmingly, while the crew members voted "yes."

The officers said:
"We are more than willing to cooperate with the owners and always have, but we are unwilling to cooperate with the radical elements of the crew. If the association were formed, the crew would have an equal voice in the affairs of the ship, according to the suggestion from the main office, and which we are unwilling to concede."

"Aboard every ship is a member of" this radical organization "who had plenty of opportunity to start the fire from the time the cargo was loaded until the hatches were permanently closed."

"The radicals of the crew are most antagonistic to the owners and you will see more fires aboard ships very soon."

The senator urged a tri-state organization to "honestly set forth to prospective residents the advantages to be found in the three states."

"Spokane, Portland, Seattle, Boise, Tacoma and other population centers should forget their own petty jealousies and work together striving for the good of the entire Pacific Northwest and not for their own individual areas," he said.
