

WHITE RUSSIANS FACE STARVATION UNDER TURK RULE

Law Reserves Trades and Crafts for Turkish Citizens—Russians Are Un- able to Find New Refuge

By Ferdinand C. M. Jahn
United Press Staff Correspondent.
ISTANBUL—(UP)—More than two thousand White Russians are facing starvation.

Following the unexpected reversal of the government's decision that Russian emigrants should be exempted from the law reserving most trades and crafts to Turkish citizens and ordering that all foreign workers should quit their jobs on certain dates, these White Russians will find themselves without employment.

Unlike other nationals whose governments are providing repatriation for their destitute countrymen, the White Russians are unable to find a new refuge as practically all countries are refusing them admission because of the unemployment problem.

Peria and Brazil were seen as possible refuges, but both require immigrants to possess certain funds, which most White Russians do not possess. Compromise sought.

Gabriel Couteaux, the honorary representative of the Nansen committee, is contacting the foreign office here and hopes that a compromise may be reached.

A similar solution is being negotiated with Greece whose nationals also have been very hard hit.

The funds of the American committee for the relief of White Russians, which up till recently has been able to spend $300 to $400 monthly on assisting the disabled and sick now practically are exhausted.

Attitude Changed Surprised. The attitude of the government has caused a great deal of surprise here heretofore they have shown the greatest hospitality towards the White Russians. Political circles are puzzled about this move since rumors that the measure is due to pressure from Moscow appear to be unfounded.

It is estimated that the law will affect seven to eight thousand workers, representing with their families about 25,000 persons. Of these it is estimated that about 50 per cent are Greeks, 20 per cent Italians, 15 per cent Bulgarians and the remainder belong to various countries. So far 500 Greeks have been repatriated and 230 have applied for Turkish citizenship.

The Russians affected are mostly chauffeurs, musicians, writers and workmen, including numerous former officers who participated in Wrangel's campaign and came to Istanbul in 1919.

RENO, Nev.—(UP)—The famed Amargosa river, which flows underground for more than 50 miles, offers favorable conditions for water storage in its gravel beds, state engineers reported.

The Amargosa starts in a group of Springs near Beatty in southern Nevada, runs above ground a few miles and then plunges into the deep sands of the Amargosa desert to reappear nearly 50 miles to the southward at Ash Meadows. Leaving Ash Meadows the stream flows underground to the extreme south end of Death Valley, where it turns north and toward the low point of the valley.

The Amargosa valley, mostly desert, has tremendous depths of sands and gravel and very broad stream channels. Engineers explained these conditions offer excellent opportunities for underground water storage.
