Chicago Follies
At Craterian In Novel Stage Show

Colonel Ches Davis' Chicago Follies moves into the Craterian theater tomorrow for a one-day engagement on the stage. Judging from all advance reports, this lavishly staged production surpasses anything shown here in years. Set against a spectacular background of 1,000,000 rhinestones, the show boasts of much talent.

Ches' Stage's Ten Barbarians, a radio and vaudeville band of renowned importance, headline the flashy array of genius. The boys offer their own symphonic arrangement of the popular "When Day Is Done," said to rival the original by Paul Whiteman. In addition to their own specialties, the boys form a musical background to the entire program.

Another act to offer something decidedly different is The Littlejohns, reported to be the only two people in the world to do their entire act atop two large rhinestone balls. Thirty thousand rhinestones grace the surface of the spheres.

Frank Starr, whose act has thus far left audiences clamoring for more, does impersonations of sound effects in a radio studio along with a brief resume of the stars of the other waves.

The Matthew Twins, two fast, good-looking steppers from the recent Broadway musical success, "Strike Me Pink," in the heat of their entire act atop two large rhinestone balls. "You Nasty Man" comes into its own when Anita Muth, vest pocket edition of Sophie Tucker, gives it her own spin.

Whistling, humming and laughing, enthusiastic audiences are leaving the Studio theater, unashamedly declaring "Twenty Million Sweethearts" delightful entertainment, and attesting the arrival of a new screen team, which will probably be registered among the great lovers of the cinema, Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers.

Pat O'Brien is cast in a part made to order for his unique abilities as a comedian, and Powell and Rogers make musical love throughout the action of the fast moving and hilariously funny comedy.
