OTHERS INVOLVED IN LINDY KIDNAP IS OFFICIAL VIEW

6. He formerly worked at Hopewell, near the Lindbergh home, and had access to a lumber company where could be obtained the lumber of the peculiar marking that was noted in the wood used in the kidnaper's ladder.

7. Hauptmann has not worked at his trade since about the time of the kidnaping, yet appeared to have money to meet his expenses easily.

8. He is understood to have entered the United States illegally, as a stowaway, 11 years ago, while on parole from a German prison camp.

Got Money from "Fish."

Hauptmann insists he knows nothing about the origin of the money found in his possession. He told Bronx questioners this morning that he got the money about three weeks ago "from a man named 'Fish.'" "Fish" has since died, Hauptmann added.

The reason the money was concealed in his garage—under the floor and in the sash of the door—Hauptmann said, was because he "had no confidence in banks."

Since Hauptmann's arrest Tuesday morning, he has been constantly questioned, first by New York police, then by the New Jersy state police (who are directing the hunt for the baby killer), then by federal agents (whom former President Hoover told to "make the Lindbergh kidnaping a live and never-to-be-forgotten case"), and finally by Bronx officers.

In this uninterrupted interrogation, Hauptmann's story has changed in several respects, officers said. His retience has been a shield against questioners, who nevertheless have found pertinent points at variance with known facts, they say.

Story Tangled.

The story of getting the money from "a man named Fish," for instance, contradicted an earlier story he is said to have told that he got the money from a bank. A check at the bank failed to substantiate his story.

Although Dr. Condon was unable to make positive identification of Hauptmann as the man who got the ransome money, a taxicab driver identified the suspect as the one who gave him a note to deliver to Condon four days after Condon had advertised his readiness to act as intermediary in the abduction case.

"That's the man," said the cab driver, putting his hand on Hauptmann.

"You are not telling the truth," said Hauptmann.

Three storekeepers of the Bronx pointed out Hauptmann as the man who in recent weeks has passed "Lindbergh money" over their counters.

Wife Is Released.

Hauptmann's wife was questioned, but released early today. Police said she had no connection with the extortion plot.

"Jafsie," who now is 74 years old, spent many hours yesterday and last night with officers. He spent more than an hour early today closeted with Hauptmann and District Attorney Foley at the Bronx courthouse. When he left he had failed to make positive identification of the suspect as the man to whom he paid the ransom money.

During the time he was with Hauptmann, "Jafsie" had a chance to hear his voice and to listen for the peculiarities of speech which he noted in his interviews with the ransom receiver. It was learned, too, that "Jafsie" was given a chance to study the Hauptmann handwriting, but had not been satisfied that it was the same as that of the ransom notes.

Identification Poor.

It is understood, too, that yesterday when "Jafsie" was called upon to look over a lineup of several men in an effort to see if he could recognize the "John" to whom the ransom was paid, he picked out Hauptmann and two other men who were detectives. These men, he said, "looked like" the "John" of the cemetery tryst.

During the five years Hauptmann has lived on the upper floor of the Bronx house, he has never worked at his trade of carpenter, so far as neighbors could say today. He habitually left home each morning, they said, taking a bus to the subway and the subway downtown—"to the stock market," as he told those inquisitive ones who pressed him for some explanation of his means of livelihood.

Hauptmann owned a Dodge sedan, purchased about a year before the baby was kidnaped, and this recalled today the story of a student who told, at the time of the kidnaping, of seeing such a car with ladders tied across the top, near the kidnap scene in New Jersey.

Garage Mystery Spot.

The garage in which the ransom money was found was something of a mystery to neighbors of the Hauptmanns. They said the Hauptmann car was seldom in the garage, and that two men spent a great deal of time in the place.

One of the places where Hauptmann was a frequent customer was Hans' Bavarian beer garden, where Hauptmann was wont to linger over his beer and a game of pinochle.

Speaking today of Hauptmann, Hans Heinzmann, proprietor of the garden, said:

"Ach, I am so surprised. He was a very nice man."

The actual lead to Hauptmann's arrest was given by Johnny Lyons and Walter Lyle, gas station attendants. The Hauptmann sedan drove up several days ago and Hauptmann asked for "five gallons of ethyl." To pay the 98-cent bill, Haupmann dug a gold certificate from his pocket.

Lyle, who took the money, commented on the scarcity of gold notes.

"Yes," Hauptmann replied. "I've only got about a hundred of them left myself."

Stalling for time (for the sight of the gold note in itself was a suspicious circumstance), Lyle sought to engage the man in conversation. Hauptmann, however, asked curtly for his change.

Got License Number.

As he drove away, Lyle scribbled the sedan's license plate number across the face of the bill.

With the recovery of the $13,750 in the Hauptmann garage, there still is approximately $31,000 of the ransom payment unaccounted for. Further search of the Hauptmann premises is under way today.

The home of the Hauptmanns is at 1279 East 222nd street, a sparsely settled part of the Bronx. The house is four miles from the entrance to Woolawn cemetery, where "Jafsie" held a preliminary conference with the ransom seeker. "Jafsie's" home is about an equal distance from the cemetery.

St. Raymonds' cemetery, where the ransom was finally paid, is about six miles from where the Hauptmanns live.

Throughout the never - ceasing search for the man who had got the Lindbergh cash, the authorities have felt that the eventual solution would lead them back to the Bronx. From time to time gold certificates made their appearance, but always the original source was far in the background by the time police got word of it.

ROGUES MAY GET PORTLAND CHANCE IF WIN IN G. PASS

The Medford Rogues go to Grants Pass Sunday for another game with Ken Williams' potential state champion ball club. The last meeting of the two teams resulted in a 1 to 1 tie, which went 15 innings, when the game was called on account of darkness.

"Chuck" Woodward, the Merinoff Beer King, will again be on the mound for the Rogues. Woodward, with Nelson of Grants Pass, stand out as the best pitchers in southern Oregon.

Billie Calvert, the youngster who was such a sensation during the summer, has returned to Medford and will do the catching, with Ivan Neathamer, who has done very good to date, in reserve.

The Rogues seem to have found themselves and have been playing good ball, their latest achievement being victories in a three-game series with the northern California all-stars and the much-talked-of 15-inning game with the Cavemen.

A game with the Blitz Weinhart team of Portland, northwest champions, is in the offing, should the Rogues be victorious in the Grants Pass battle. The game would be played at the Vaughn street grounds at Portland, according to present plans.

ROMAN MEAL RECIPES

GINGER BREAD
Plain

¼ cup butter.
1 cup brown sugar.
1 egg well beaten.
½ cup sour milk.
1 cup flour.
1 teaspoon ginger.
1 teaspoon mixed spices.
1 teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon soda.
1 cup Roman meal.

Cream butter and sugar, add well beaten egg and milk. Sift flour, ginger, spices, salt and soda, and add to first mixture; add Roman meal and mix well. Spread on greased pans and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) for 30 minutes.

BISCUITS (Sour Milk)

2 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon soda.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup flour.
1 cup Roman meal.
2 tablespoons shortening.
¾ to 1 cup sour milk.

Sift baking powder, soida and salt with flour; add Roman meal; mix in shortening with fork or pie blender until the mixture looks like coarse meal; add sour milk slowly to make soft dough. Mix very lightly on slightly floured board. Roll to half-inch thickness and cut with biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) for 15 minutes.

WAFFLES

1 cup flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup Roman meal.
3 eggs separated.
1¾ cups milk.
3 tablespoons melted butter.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt; add Roman meal. Beat egg yolks, mix with milk and add gradually to first mixture; add melted butter. Fold in egg whites beaten stiff. Bake on hot waffle iron.
