CHICAGO DIGS UP OLD BUILDING LAW TO WRECK SLUMS

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Armed with a law resurrected from dusty archives, Chicago is planning a swift campaign to wipe out its slums.

The law, hidden away for years, was discovered by Milton D. Smith, corporation counsel. He told the city council it authorizes the removal of unsanitary and unsafe buildings over the objections of owners.

In operation, the law gives the health department authority to order the fire department to raze buildings it has condemned. For 30 days before the work of destruction begins a sign must be posted on the building telling of the city's intentions. That is all that is required.

The campaign was originated by Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who declares he intends to have 1,000 buildings that he considers dangerous removed.

After hearing the report of Smith on the provisions of the law, the city council gave the campaign additional impetus by requesting the health department to begin making its inspections at once.

While the actual work of razing the condemned structures will be under the supervision of the fire department, it is planned to use relief workers as much as possible.
