

VOTE 'ER STRAIGHT IS KEY-NOTE OF DUNNE MEETING

G. O. P. Speakers at Ashland Urge Republicans to Support Entire Ticket — Dunne Given a Warm Welcome.

ASHLAND, Ore., Sept. 25.—(Spl.)—A large gathering of republicans welcomed Senator Joe E. Dunne of Multnomah last night when their candidate for governor appeared at the kick-off meeting in the city hall of the newly organized Ashland chapter of Oregon Republican Clubs.

Frank Van Dyke, president of the chapter and city attorney, presided. On the platform were other party leaders and legislative and county candidates, including Senator George Dunn of Jackson county. The latter paid a high tribute to his namesake colleague from Multnomah when called to the speaker's rostrum.

The gubernatorial nominee pledged his listeners continued relentless activity to maintain and improve wherever occasion warrants the various educational institutions of the state.

"Education of our young is and always has been one of my pet hobbies and it is a serious problem," he declared.

"I battled diligently in the senate and elsewhere to obtain for your normal school its junior college rating; and take my word for it, and the word of your own Senator Dunn who fought right along with me, it was no snap."

The senator said he proposes to establish a state department of industry, for the purpose of finding and creating new markets for Oregon farm and industrial products.

"Pursuer," he went on, "I shall send salesmen into the far reaches of the country to sell our unsurpassed scenic attractions. Our tourist industry is the second largest in the state. We can make it first by the simple expedient mention."

Dunne referred in this connection to the "deplorable condition" of the road over the Siskiyou.

"The almost impossible twists and turns are driving tourists from our Oregon vacation land," he said. "I sometimes think our highway engineers used a corkscrew instead of a transit when laying out the local system."

"A road-building program looking toward immediate correction of this situation is one of my major objectives."

Senator Dunne was guest of honor at an informal dinner in the Lithia hotel preceding the meeting.

Introduced to the city hall gathering in addition to the two Senators Dunne were Captain Cleo F. Hogan, vice-chairman of the state central committee for Multnomah county, who is a member of the gubernatorial aspirant's party; Representative Glen Taylor and A. R. Brockway, County Judge E. B. Day, County Commissioner R. E. Nealon, Sheriff Walter Olmstead, County Surveyor Paul B. Rynning, Mayor Morton Wiley, and Don Newbury, president of the Medford chapter of Republican Clubs. Hogan and Newbury spoke briefly, both urging unstinted support for the entire party ticket.

REV. SMEE GUEST OF WEATHERFORD, NAZARENE PULPIT

Rev. Roy F. Smee, of Stockton, Cal., pulpit guest of Fred M. Weatherford, pastor, and speaker in Sunday's services at the Nazarene church, drew his text last night from Titus 2:14.

"Who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

In part, the speaker said:

"Man seeking to be a god made a fool of himself, and as the result of sin reigns today. The redeeming feature of man's plight lies in the fact that God's estimate and sympathy for him gave His own Son to redeem man, while Christ, in turn, gave Himself for the purpose of buying man back to the position of his rightful heritage."

"In the first instance man did not come into being by mere chance, for back of him, as in all nature, there is a great designer. In fact, nothing has come by chance. That chair yonder was not saved from the tree, though it was produced by the tree. There had to be a designer before it could take the shape of a chair. So man had back of him God as the great designer."

"The fact that the eye, the most delicate organ of the human body, is set in an armor of bone, was not a mere happenstance. God so arranged it, for protection. The eye lashes are the handiwork of God to protect this delicate organ, acting as a sieve to shield the eye from dust particles, and the direct rays of the sun. The eye brows, too—and by the way, some of us still have a few left—were not put there to pluck out, but as a protecting agency for the eye. Did you ever see any eyebrows turning toward the nose? The Master Hand of creation turned them out, as a waterbed to shield the eye from perspiration."

"God's plan is to redeem us, and I like to feature that word 'us,' which includes the whole human race. God's program is not a partial recovery for man. He was particular to insert 'from all iniquity' and more—He said He would 'purify unto Himself a peculiar people,' which means an unusual people. A people not marked by any peculiarity of dress, except it be by a mark of modesty, but a people marked for the piety. Much of our moral trouble today has emanated from the source of immodest dress. In many circles today, dress is not marked so much by what you have on, as for the lack of attire."

"Then I would have you note that God's only handicap is the will of man to turn to Him for sin's remedy, which is seen in the tragedy of Calvary."

'BAA' BLEATS SCRIBE AFTER GULPING HUNK TURKISH GOAT CHEESE

By Dick Applegate

A small, but powerful piece of goat's cheese, smelling like no respectable goat should smell, regardless of the unavailing reputation of goats in general, somehow escaped the notice of the inspectors of the pure food department, and found its way from its home in Turkey to the hands of Maynard Bush, of the Tribune printing staff, this morning.

Mr. Bush, rotund and genial, hated to keep the prize to himself, as that would be mean and unfriendly, so he generously divided the piece, he had into small squares, passing them around the editorial rooms. The writer, being a trusting—and greedy—sort, popped the tiny square into his mouth with no further ado, thinking it to be the piece of fudge, which it most resembled.

This was a mistake!

Innocent and inoffensive looking enough to the eye, but pungent and clinging to the palate, the cheese is gone, but the memory lingers on—lingers and irritates.

That makes the second time this correspondent has been stung in like manner.

The last time was when, offered "cheese" by Fred "Killer" Colvig, he bit deeply into a succulent bit of laundry soap! Sooner or later his common sense, if any, will overcome his hunger, and then he'll no longer be prey for marauding practical jokesters.

MARTIN HAS PLAN MILK CONTROL TO TO LIGHTEN LOAD SET AVERAGES IN OF GASOLINE TAX LOCAL PRODUCTION

Democratic Candidate for Governor Says Road Bond Interest Load Can Be Reduced Within Few Years

PORTLAND, Sept. 25.—(Spl.)—A program by which Oregon's highway debt load can be reduced from $23,000,000 to $10,000,000 in the next five years and the annual interest requirements cut from $1,300,000 in 1935 to $500,000 in 1940, without curtailing maintenance or new construction to provide employment, has been outlined here by Congressman Charles H. Martin, Democratic candidate for governor.

A safe two-cent reduction in the present state gasoline tax would be the result of such a program, Congressman Martin declared.

Joint Action Planned.

He proposes joint action by the governors and congressional delegations of the 17 western land grant states to compel congressional enactment of legislation permitting an alternate use of federal aid money for debt retirement, without obligation of matching, thereby releasing highway funds for new construction.

Such a program, he explained in detail, would provide a total of $13,500,000 for new construction in the five-year period, as against $11,000,000 under the federal aid matching system. The difference of $2,500,000 utilized in the purchase of outstanding highway bonds on the open market would increase the bond retirement by $5,000,000 in five years and enable the state to pay off $13,000,000 of its present highway bonds.

Would Curb Bonding.

Congressman Martin also pledged himself to strive for the enactment of legislation to curtail the issuance of further bonds by the state or any of its subdivisions and to compel taxing units to provide annually for retirement of outstanding debt obligations, to eliminate from the property tax burden the 43 cents of every .45 dollar now going to debt requirements.

He pledged his full and undivided time and attention to the office of governor and promised to give the state's business his personal attention as chief executive and budget director.

Chairman of Board Tells Dairymen Man Will Be Here Soon to Work Out Plan — Talk Enforcement

Within ten days, the Oregon state milk control board will have a man in Medford to work out a system of basic averages for the producers in that market, E. G. Harlan of Portland, chairman of the board said yesterday at the meeting conducted at the courthouse.

With Mason W. Burgess, a member of the board, from Klamath Falls, and John Billings of Ashland, field representative of the board, Mr. Harlan conducted a meeting for all milk producers and those interested in the marketing of the product.

About fifty were in attendance from all parts of Josephine and Jackson counties, and enforcement of uniform prices was discussed.

To Control Production

Each production quota on the Medford market will be checked under the production control plan, and Mr. Harlan pointed out that with the increase in price, the board is required to control the amount of production, in order not to overstock the market.

A person entitled December 15 as a producer, to have milk used in this city, even if dropped by the distributors, will be rated under the milk control board's regulations. The averages will be worked out by a staff member of the board from Portland.

An average of produce brought to market over a period of two or three years will be used in averaging the quota for each producer, Mr. Harlan said.

He told the audience that the milk law is working out satisfactorily throughout the state, and although milk had to be raised to 11 cents a quart on deliveries in Portland, there has been an actual increase in sales.

Profit Equalized

Figures outlined by Mr. Harlan, showed that before the milk board was set up 49 per cent of the profit went to the producer, and 51 per cent to the distributor. After the first order of the board was put out in January, the producer received 53.3 per cent, while the distributor only made 46.7 per cent. The last order, effective September 16, raised the producer's per centage still higher, giving him 56.1 per cent and the distributor 43.9 per cent. These figures were based on data from the city of Portland.
