By the author of Judith Lane Marian Gordon by JEANNE BOWMAN Chapter One COMPLICATED CASE

MARIAN GORDON stood at an open window of the Morning Dispatch editorial rooms, and looked out on the spring night. Looked down, to be exact. Had she looked out she would have seen tall buildings, inset with yellow oblongs that were windows, and above these the luminous glow of an evening sky. Looking down, however, she saw something far more pleasing.

On the near street corner, pooled within the circle of a park light, stood Tony Gazetti's flower stand. The stand was a blurred tier of many colors, gold of acacia, jonquil and tulip, deep pink of cyclamen and japonica, purple of violet and hyacinth, and the inevitable splash of orange-red marigold.

Behind the stand was the triangular city square, before it, an imposing looking roadster, its smooth black surface enhanced with shining chromium-plated fenders.

Marian saw neither the stand, the square, nor the automobile. She was watching two men who stood on the sidewalk.

She watched Tony Gazetti because he was waving his arms. That meant he was talking and she wondered what he could have to say to Lon Casad that would call forth such gestures.

Once she had focused her attention on Casad, she forgot everything.

Marian Gordon stood at an open window.

Lon was waiting to take her to dinner. He had been waiting for the last hour while she wrote a story on the afternoon session of the William Brown bribery trial. He'd have to keep on waiting until her city editor reappeared from wherever he'd disappeared to and told her she was through for the night.

Tony, however, was benefiting by the wait, for the shelf behind the seat of the car was filled with cornucopia shaped packages. Marian knew there would be violets. "To match your eyes," Lon would say.

That was foolish of him. Her eyes were that nondescript blue which obligingly took on the shade of the truck or hat she wore. And there would be marigolds, "to match your hair." An atrocious exaggeration—"to match my temper," she always countered, and he would laugh.

But then, he'd never seen a display of that temper. She must see that he didn't, or he wouldn't laugh and he wouldn't wait on street corners.

"Miss Gordon," a boyish voice interrupted, "the M.E. wants you in his office right away."
