

Annual Pioneer Reunion Stirs Early Day Memories

(By Dick Applegate)

Ghosts walked in Jacksonville yesterday. The memory ghosts of the early days when Medford was still many years in the future, and thousands of dollars' worth of gold a day were being taken from the hills where the town of Jacksonville now stands. Memories of long treks across the plains which terminated at the then young and vigorous mining town. Memories of the first efforts at self-government, the vigilante committees, the hardships endured in crushing crimes such as rustling, claim jumping and horse stealing.

The 26th annual reunion of the pioneers of southern Oregon was a huge success. The town of Jacksonville was young again. Once more the flagstone walks, the horses and buggies, the mines, the banks, the general stores, the music and gaiety seemed to rise. Men who knew the town as it was then ignored the sleepy atmosphere of the present day, and to them it was one thrilling, far-flung frontier of their boyhood. Imaginations flickered. Old tired eyes grew young again, and old tired ladies and gentlemen grew young again.

Old gentlemen tapped their canes and turned their thoughts back through the years. Old eyes sparkled, as old wars and dangers were remembered, and related.

Young gentlemen tapped their feet, and turned their whole attention to the stories that unfolded before their eyes. Young eyes sparkled as the ever new struggle to exist and enjoy life was recounted by those who have the right to advise.

Old ladies rocked in their chairs and talked happily of the pies they used to bake, of the meals they used to cook for their tired men who were busy wrestling what is now the Rogue valley from the wilderness. Old ladies wistfully recalled the olden times, when dances in the town hall were events to be talked about for months before and after.

Young ladies sat primly on the edges of their chairs and listened happily to the words of wisdom their grandmothers had to say on the art of baking, sewing, and making happy homes. Young ladies wistfully lived with the old ladies through the exciting parties of that day and inquired about the fashions of that now far-away time.

Now the story would be told of the cougar that was trend and shot, after killing a calf, in what is now the city park at Ashland. That was when there was but one house in the town.

Then the story, surprising and almost unbelievable, told by F. D. Swingle. That venerable gentleman was born in Jackson county, reared in Jackson county, married in Lake county and brought up his family there. He now lives with his family in Klamath county—and has never lived in any but the one house in which he was brought up!

Of all the pioneers who were charter members of the association, only 23 remain! Only two were present at the meeting yesterday; Mrs. Owen, the oldest pioneer present, and Mrs. Gwin Butler. The years are taking their toll of the fine old people, but their spirit marches on, unquench-

We're getting old and feeble now. Our lives are nearly past. To some of us old Pioneers This gathering is our last.

We hope to meet old Pioneers All safely on that shore— Yes, everyone of our loved band. To live forevermore.

IT CERTAINLY FOOLED ME!
