Labor Ruling Interpreted
Richberg, in his talk at a national press club gathering, gave this interpretation of the national labor relations board's ruling on the collective bargaining rights of labor:

"They, the board laid down the theory that when an election by any group no matter what its size was held for the purpose of selecting their representatives, and when they had chosen by a majority their representatives, those were the men who had been chosen to represent the voters.

But the board carefully pointed out that they were not laying down the theory that a majority of all the employees of the plant must be decisive."

"The individual has the right to represent himself and his grievances and his complaints and has a right to get together a committee in his interests . . . That is a separate and individual right but when it comes to the choice of representatives, if he joins in electing representatives, he must abide by the will of the majority of the group."

Miss Flora Thurston, until recently executive secretary of the National Council of Parent Education, New York City and an educator of national prominence will be the main speaker both morning and afternoon.

Miss Thurston was a member of the committee on family life and parent education at the White House conference on child health and protection, and was later a member of the committee on family life of the President's conference on home building and home ownership.
