Fine Cast Appears In Rialto Picture

"One More River," John Galsworthy's latest novel, comes to the Rialto theatre tomorrow for a three-day run in its screen version that has Diana Wynyard in the starring role. A distinguished supporting cast, including such players as Colin Clive, Reginald Denny, Frank Lawton, C. Aubrey Smith, Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Lionel Atwill, is a vital factor in helping to bring the story to a successful screen play.

Telling the story of a woman married to one man, loving another, and yet keeping that fact a secret from the rest of the world, "One More River," promises much in the way of "class" entertainment.

Diana Wynyard is Lady Clare, married to Sir Jerry Corvey, but in love with Tony Croome. When the husband discovers this fact, his attempts to "shadow" his pretty wife, and discover evidence that could be used in a divorce court, form some amusing situations. However, the case is called to court, Lady Clare is brought to the stand and, trying to shield the weaknesses of her husband, and at the same time, withhold the facts of her romance with Tony, she finds herself in the unavoidable position of becoming stampted with the disapproval of her friends and of the world in general. Famous Novel Now On Craterian Bill

Lending vivid reality to the "down to earth" American characters of Gene Stratton-Porter's famous best-seller, "A Girl of the Limberlost," was received with enthusiastic response at the Craterian theatre yesterday where it opened a three-day run.

Being a faithful transcription of the Gene Stratton-Porter original, and preserving the full flavor of the mid-western rural locale, the photoplay serves to bring to life the characters that have become known and loved by millions of readers.

The story, as most everyone knows, deals with the efforts of pretty Elinora Comstock to gain an education against the determined opposition of her mother, who has hated the child since her birth.

Into the plot enters the two kindly souls, Wes and Margaret Sinton, and little Billy, the orphaned ragamuffin, whom Elinora befriends. Then the efforts of "The Bird Woman" are enlisted in Elinora's cause, and finally, with her high-schooling almost complete, comes the love of Phillip Ammon, son of Dr. Ammon. Complications ensue with the arrival of Phillip's fiancée but with her departure, and the mother's discovery that she has wronged her daughter all her life, comes the touching finale.

It is a simple story, but beautifully told. The leading roles, played to perfection, are taken by Marian Marsh as Elinora, the "girl of the limberlost," Louise Dresser, as her mother; Ralph Morgan and Helen Jerome Eddy as Wes and Margaret Sinton; Henry B. Walthall, as Dr. Ammon, and Edward Nugent as his son, Phillip. Betty Blythe, former star of the silent era, has the role of "The Bird Woman."

TURKISH CANNONADE EXCUSED AS MISTAKE

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The shelling of two French destroyers in the gulf of Smyrna Saturday by Turkish coastal batteries was "just a misunderstanding," according to an official explanation today.

Turkey protested to France over alleged violations of her territorial waters by the two French vessels, but it was understood the matter has been settled to the complete satisfaction of both Turkey and France. The French returned the fire.
