There will be a "Parents School" soon. It is hoped no pupil neglects her housework to find out how her daughter should be run.

Samuel I. Chap. 22, Verse 2, aptly describes the 1934 model Oregon politician as follows: "And every one that was in distress, and everyone that was in debt, and everyone that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him; and he became captain over them."

Fashion has created a "pancake beret" that will sell for $22.50, and same will be purchased by feminine slaves to fashion, who need pancakes more than they need berets.

There has been no strike in Portland the past 24 hours, inasmuch as no walking delegate, riding in a Cadillac, found fault with the way an employer combed his hair.

WOODBURN SCHOLARS MARCH OUT FOR FIRE
WOODBURN, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The pupils remained calm and filed out in orderly manner to the fire drill signal and they took a vacation after a fire started at the Junior high school here today and caused about $1000 damage before being controlled.

A Study in Consistency

WE are rather sorry for those people—and newspaper editors—who can't take their politics "with a smile." They miss so much fun. Not that we would discourage a serious attitude toward public affairs, but there is such a thing as being too serious—and by being too serious, losing that great revealer of the truth—a proper perspective.

After all, by and large, the differences between political parties, are merely differences in OPINIONS.—usually honest ones. It should be perfectly possible to honestly differ with someone else, and still resist the temptation to commit manslaughter, or cross that person off the list of friendly intercourse.

It should be. But often it isn't. THESE observations have been called forth by a newspaper editor up state who, during the past week, has been burned up by two political developments. First the endorsement of Upton Sinclair by Senator McAdoo and other democratic leaders in California; and second the defection of registered Republicans, from the Dunne camp, in this state.

Working himself up to a righteous frenzy, this staunch supporter of the G.O.P., smashes out at Democrats like McAdoo, for supporting a radical and hellraiser "just to keep the state in line for Roosevelt"; and at the same time flays hip and thigh those "so-called members of the Republican party who would desert Joe Dunne, the regular nominee of their party, at a critical time like this."

And judging by the editorial page, the writer sees neither the inconsistency nor the humor of the spectacle he presents. It only goes to show how extreme partisanship can blind the eye and befog the brain.

FOR, obviously, the editor is condemning the McAdoo democrats of California, for doing precisely what he is doing and has done these many years,—sticking by the regular nominee of the party, regardless of what his character, ability or attainments might be,—"voting the ticket straight!"

UPTON SINCLAIR withdrew from the Socialist party, joined the Democratic party, entered the primaries of that party, and won the nomination by a large plurality, in a perfectly fair and square race. Joe Dunne, in the Republican primary did the same thing in this state—only by a much smaller plurality.

Many Democrats in California didn't like Sinclair,—fought him in the primary. Many Republicans in Oregon didn't like Dunne—fought HIM in the primary. But McAdoo and his supporters, after thinking the matter over decided a primary is a primary,—a party is a party,—they would be good 100% Democrats and stick by both. Hundreds of Republicans in Oregon, did the same thing. Dunne was not their choice but they too, decided to stick by the party,—saw no good reason for deserting the party's regular nominee.

ON the other hand in both states, other Republicans and Democrats reasoned differently. They placed principle above party. They decided to disregard purely partisan considerations, and support the candidate they believed best qualified for the job regardless of what political label he might wear.

Therefore, many Democrats in California are supporting a Republican for governor, just as many Republicans in Oregon are supporting a Democrat for the same office. But our worthy contemporary up state, proclaims the California action "what every consideration of decency and good citizenship demands," while absolutely identical action in Oregon "is a shame and a crime."

It makes so much difference WHOSE ox is gone!

AND while we agree the reasons for voting against Sinclair in California are far more urgent and persuasive than the reasons for voting against Dunne in this state,—after all this comes down to merely a matter of opinion. In both cases the essential principle is the same. Yet on raves ye fiery editor, lambasting California Democrats for sticking by their party; lambasting Oregon Republicans, for not doing so.

Aye, verily, it's a funny world, mates—particularly during a political campaign!

NOW IS THE TIME TO CATCH UP ON EDUCATION.

It is a sad commentary on modern educational methods or pedagogic practice that "Happy Days Are Here Again." Vacation days should, of course, be happy days for every child. But so should school days. School days are happy days for a fortunate few children who happen to have the more competent teachers.

Understands how to make school and learning tolerable if not actually enjoyable. It was the old martinet business in antiquated school systems that made school hateful to the victims. Convinced by the positive results achieved by higher standards of teaching and school management we are steadily drawing away from the quaint Chinese system and approaching the something akin to sanity in the conduct of the schoolroom.

If you remember your own childhood you may recall a time or two when you were not so sad at the opening of school nor so overjoyed when the term was over. That was when you had exceptionally skilled teachers.

Quoted from a paper on Non-competitive Treatment, read before the New York State Medical Society by Dr. Madge C. L. McCullough. "To prevent dysmenorrhea as well as all other feminine ills, strictest attention should be paid learned the trade. Naturally they don't quite understand what it is all about. Every boy should have a course of boxing lessons. Every girl should have a course of esthetic dancing lessons.

In vacation time every young person should enjoy the advantage of training of one kind or another to promote good physical development, skill, agility, capability. If there is any doubt as to the child's capacity to enter upon such training, the only fair course is to give the child the benefit of a health examination by the family physician. And then be guided by the doctor's advice and not by your own notions.

Compound Is Trick Word. Taking licorice powder twice a week for indigestion. Do you recommend same?—J. L. S.

Answer—Sir, if we recommend compound licorice powder, we recommend something just as good. Change your compound to the powder is rarely found.

Compound Licorice Powder is a mixture of senna, sulphur, licorice, oil of fennel and sugar. For the softening effect of the sulphur it is much used in postpartum cases and in certain painful renal conditions.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

A READER brings to the writer of this column, here in October, with winter just around the corner, a branch from an apple tree with blossoms as fresh and pink as if it were spring.

Another reader tells of a cherry tree in his yard that is blossoming as unconcernedly as if it were April or May.

IT'S A cock-eyed world, isn't it? Even the fruit trees don't know where they're at.

A DISPATCH from Madrid tells us, "The Spanish republic was fighting for its existence tonight against a combination of rebellious socialists, communists and syndicalists in a political blood-letting which already has cost at least 100 lives."

MORE evidence of a cock-eyed world. What the Spanish people NEED is to get down to work, producing more new wealth, getting for themselves new comforts and conveniences—taking advantage of modern progress to make themselves happier and more comfortable than they ever were before.

Instead, they're fighting and KILLING each other.

HAVE you paused recently to think of this: In the past few years, religion has been at a lower ebb throughout the world than at any time in a century. And in these same years the world has suffered terribly from selfishness, greed, intolerance and the idea, promulgated by clabbered thinkers, that we can all get rich without work.

If we had a little more good, old-fashioned religion and a little less of the so-called modern thinking, we might be better off.

BUT this column seems to be running into a strain of pessimism, and this writer has little use for pessimists. So let's see if we can't find a few HOPEFUL slants in the news.

A WASHINGTON dispatch informs us: "NRA policy moving sharply away from price fixing today, and headed toward competition in a free market."

That is a hopeful sign. It is hopeful because about all the progress we've ever had in this world has come about because of competition in a free market.

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION

THE theory of price fixing says: "Everybody is as good as everybody else, and no better. We'll all go along on a dead level, with nobody getting an advantage over anybody else."

The theory of free competition says: "If you're better than the other fellow, and can produce a better article than he does and sell it at a lower price, you can get ahead in the world and BE SOMEBODY."

THE world has been brought up from savagery to civilization NOT by those who have been perfectly satisfied to be just as good as everybody else, but by those who have been determined to be BETTER than the average, and so get ahead in the world.

If NRA can teach business to be fairer and decenter than it has been in the past, with less dog eat dog and more live and let live, and yet can keep alive the spirit of free competition that has brought us hope for all the progress we have, there is about for it as a permanent institution.

If all it can think of is limiting production and jacking up the price, there isn't much hope for it.
