CORVALLIS, Ore. This Saturday Oregon State college will play the team against which for years it has made a strong showing—University of Southern California. The game is at Los Angeles.

Pass defense and more attention to offense will occupy the Beavers this week.

(By the Associated Press) MOSCOW, Idaho—Underdog meets underdog here next Saturday. The Idaho Vandals, who lost to Gonzaga the last time they played, will tackle the visiting University of Oregon, fresh from a defeat by the University of Washington.

SEATTLE, Wash.—The first organized week since Saturday's big win over Oregon was in store for the University of Washington Huskies today with contact staff planned for those who saw no action in Portland. The regulars will look on. The Huskies face the California Bears a week from Saturday here. No game is scheduled this week—E. J.

PULLMAN, Wash.—Eager to let bygones be bygones, the Washington State Cougars were back to work today, preparing for the invasion October 27 of the Oregon State Beavers. The Cougars wanted to forget that 13-6 defeat administered by Gonzaga Saturday, but there were certain persons who wouldn't let them. So, unless they cool off over the idle week end, they'll take their spite out on their guests.

BERKELEY—After their one-point victory over College of the Pacific last Saturday, the University of California varsity ran through a vicious scrimmage last night which put Jas. Cowling, guard, in the infirmary with a broken nose. Coach Ingram, pleased with the results of the scrimmage, announced regular full-time games every night this week in preparation for the game with U. C. L. A. next Saturday.

PALO ALTO—With five first string tridders out with injuries, Coach "Tny" Thornhill of Stanford university is faced with the problem of getting a team full of reserves ready for the game with the University of San Francisco next Saturday. The Indians' backfield is hit hardest, with Grayson, Hamilton and Gordon head out, while Linsmen Woody, Adams, and Keith Topping, are also laid up.

SPOKANE, Wash.—Having seen what happens to football pens to football teams that win starting victories then coast for a while, the Gonzaga Bulldogs are careful not to fall into those evil ways. Coach Mike Pecarovich had the boys working as hard today as if they'd never won that game Saturday from Washington State, proud conquerors of the Trojans. The Gonzagas go to Tacoma next Saturday on a round with the College of Puget Sound.

Two kings of the grip and grimace world will struggle on the armory mat next Thursday night in one of the double main events, when Giant King Kong Cox, beef grappler from Lodi, Cal., grids himself for a battle royal with Broccoli King Bob Kruse, wrist-lock artist of Oswego.

Another rough and tumble match between two of a kind was Promoter Mack Lillard's idea when he signed on Unorthodox holds as readily as fair ones with all the power stored up in their ponderous frames. King Kong, heavier than Kruse, will nevertheless be up against a tricky foe when he opens hostilities with the northerner. Although he, himself, yells with indignation, when fouled, Kruse swings into an opponent with powerful slugging when he falls at some of his other tricks.

Local fans will be given a chance to see a popular local boy in action again when Ray Frable, well-known amateur and fireman, meets Pat McBer of Los Angeles. In the other half of the double-barreled program, Agin Promoter Lillard has succeeded in billing two of a kind, and two of a very popular kind in this case, Frable, although limiting his efforts to refereeing during most of the past season, is known here as a fast and clever ringman. Light, but powerful, Frable also possesses a knowledge of scientific holds and tricks which makes him a tough opponent for any man. Thursday night he will meet his counterpart when he trades grips with McBer, another muscle man who likes speed.

HOSPITALS OPPOSE MOVE TO AMEND MEDICAL STATUTE

Oregon Institutions Fear Proposed Healing Arts Amendment, Would Damage Present Standards.

PORTLAND, Ore.—(Sp.)—That the Healing Arts Constitutional Amendment, which comes up as an initiative measure at the November 6 election, is a dangerous menace to Oregon's high health and hospital standards is the almost unanimous opinion of hospital trustees and superintendents, as expressed in a public statement issued by the Oregon Association of Hospitals here today.

"The marked advance in hospital standards in recent years has been one of the most striking phases of progress in the field of health," reads the hospital association report.

"Oregon hospitals have kept pace with national advancement and in many ways have taken a leading position. The state's low death and sickness rates, which make Oregon so attractive to home-seekers and industry, are important benefits resulting from these high hospital standards."

Won by Long Efforts. The statement outlines the long, persistent efforts of club women, civic bodies and hospital leaders to bring about the necessary legislation and cooperation on the part of hospitals and doctors to achieve the present high standing. To obtain their position of leadership hospitals have cooperated to apply essential regulations relating to sanitation, prevention of infection, the care of contagious diseases, the care of mothers in childbirth, and other practices which protect the public from infections and other complications arising from improper hospital procedure.

Incompetents Now Barred. "Essential to maintaining these standards is the right now possessed by boards of trustees of hospitals to prevent incompetent and unscrupulous doctors, of whatever school of healing—medicine, osteopathy, chiropractic, or naturopathy—from treating patients within their walls. This right possessed by hospitals is the public's essential protection against the 'diploma-mill' doctor."
