

FIREBUG, EXCITED BY ENGINES ROAR TELLS OF CRIMES

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 19.—(AP)—A transient from Minnesota was said by Fire Marshal Fred Roberts today to have confessed to setting a series of fires in Montana, eastern Oregon, the Puget Sound area and in Los Angeles.

Fire Marshal Roberts said the man, Glenn W. Pope, was arrested last night but resisted questioning until today when the screams of sirens and the roar of the engines answering a four-alarm blaze, threw him into a state of intense excitement.

City Detectives Robinson and Sanders confirmed Roberts' statement that Pope set the fires to get a "thrill."

DUCK HUNTERS RESORT OPENED

Ernie Ernst, proprietor of California-on-the-Bogue, is opening a hunting club for duck hunters on Klamath lake, today, according to word received in this city. The resort will provide accommodations for hunters from all sections of southern Oregon who wish to spend several days in the Klamath region.

The lodge is located 11 miles north of Port Klamath, situated on an island about six miles from the lake shore.

Many local duck hunters are waiting until Sunday before leaving for the lake, but several have started out with the first day of the season. K. P. McReynolds of the forest service left for Klamath early yesterday, and will meet other forest service officials for a few days' hunting. Jens Jensen is also on a duck hunting trip, as are Frank and John Perl, who are at their cabin at Rocky Point. Ray Frisbie is planning to leave Sunday.

Zane Grey

Zane Grey, "best seller" writer and world's champion fisherman is starred in the thrilling deep sea film, "South Sea Adventure," which heads the RKO theater program tomorrow.

Some most unusual inventions of modern science were used in the filming of "The Vanishing Shadow," which starts tomorrow.

The chapter-play features a vanishing belt, which gives the picture its title, and the device makes the person wearing it invisible. In addition to this there are other mysterious devices such as "Destroying Pistols," reducing anything with which they come in contact to a mere nothingness.

These contraptions are but two of the many used in the making of the picture.

Each device in the picture fits into the present day research being made by college professors all over the country. Professor Van Dorn (James Durkin) the scientist in the serial, discovers that much sought after chemical that will break down the elements in mercury, releasing the electrons and thereby obtaining electric power through the use of rays.

Earl H. York, secretary of the United States civil service board of examiners, has announced open competitive examinations for several positions, and will supply complete information regarding them to anyone interested who calls at the postoffice. The positions are as follows:

RURAL INDUSTRIAL COMMUNITIES TO BE STARTED SOON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, said at his press conference today that twelve rural-industrial communities, housing from 150 to 200 families each, would be built immediately with relief funds in different sections of the country.

The administrator disclosed that detailed plans for about 80 such projects have been made at relief headquarters but that money to build all of them was not yet available.

"I'm convinced that everyone of the twelve communities which we're going to build at this time will be self-liquidating," Hopkins said.

He asserted it had not yet been decided whether the relief-built homes would be sold to the occupants or leased to them, but said that the cost of occupying these houses would be "very, very cheap."

Displaying pictures of one of the 150 small houses now being built at the rural-industrial community of Red House, West Virginia, he said that the house and the ten acre tract on which it stood cost only $1,600. He said 200 more homes were planned at Red House.

RELIEF BY WORK NOT BY DOLE IS GOVERNMENT AIM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Work relief is likely to be one government answer to so-called "permanent" unemployment.

This became clear today when officials disclosed they are testing various methods of work relief in a "laboratory" stretching from one end of the country to another. A survey showed that 1,760,000 persons—most of them heads of families—are working for relief payments.

Many experts have warned that the country must expect to have a large body of jobless people for years to come. A dole is cheaper than work relief, but FERA officials say the practice of making jobs for the unemployed maintains morale better, besides producing public improvements and goods.

The committee that is planning a program of economic security for President Roosevelt is watching the FERA venture closely, hoping to find an answer to chronic joblessness.

State relief administrators may boost the 1,760,000 total to 2,150,000—if funds are found. Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, who recently reported there were 4,000,009 families on relief rolls, is campaigning for larger state contributions.

Public construction—main reliance of the CWA, which provided jobs for more than 4,000,000 at one time last spring—still is the backbone of relief work.

New Adviser—Lawrence Berger of Berkeley, Cal., reported yesterday at Camp Oak Knoll in northern California where he will be educational adviser for the company there.

VANDERBILT CASE FIGHT TO FINISH

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—That the Vanderbilt-Whitney court struggle will be a fight to the finish was re-emphasized today, as the trial adjourned until Monday morning.

Nathan Burkan, counsel for Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, who is suing to regain custody of her 10-year-old daughter from the child's aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, said that a settlement "hasn't even been discussed."

"They can't settle with us," declared Burkan.

Mrs. Whitney, the former Gertrude Vanderbilt, widely known as a sculptor, is expected to take the stand Monday as the final witness for her side of the case. She did not attend today's session.
