"Caravan" Opens at Rialto

Tomorrow evening the Medford Gleemen will open their fall season with a concert in the Pelican theater, Klamath Falls. Last February the Gleemen sang to a packed theater in Klamath and indications are that Monday's house will be a repeat performance as to attendance. It could not possibly excel the first concert as to audience appreciation. Here is the choir's program which will be directed by James Stevens with Sebastian Apollo as accompanist:

Winter Song: Frederic Bullard. Land Sighting: Greg. Mascof of the Troop: Victor Herbert. Trumpeter: J. A. Disip. Desert Song, Arranged for Gleemen by Martha DeSousa; Sigmund Romberg. Trees: Oscar Raabach. Piano solo, Rigoleto: Verdi-Liste, Mr. Sebastian Apollo. On the Road to Mandalay: Oley Speaks. All's Holiday: Rudolph Friml. Medley of George M. Cohan's Melodies: Al. by Kenneth Clark. Baritone solo, Tramps at Sea, Herbert Stothart. Mr. James Stevens. Stenka Rasin, Cossack Song: Arr. by M. McMillan. Give a Man a Horse: Geoffrey O'Hara. Wagon Wheels, Arr. for Gleemen by Sebastian Apollo; Billy Kern. Old Man River; Jerome Kern. The Gleemen will leave Medford in a special bus at 4 p. m. Klamath to be reached at 6:30. Following the concert the men will dine before leaving Klamath for return to Medford. A number of Medford people will also make the trip in private cars.

The Andrews Opera Company

20 Years of Opera From a Rail Fence Circuit Interesting History of Medford's Pioneer Musical Family in One Night Stands in the Middle West Many Years Ago as Told by Ed Andrews to Charles Hyskell.

While touring Kentucky we had found time to sit at the feet of a horseman friend, one Alexander, breeder and trainer of race horses, I will remember one bit of his worldly wisdom: "Raise them, train them, but never bet on them." In those days we had plenty of money and that summer we built a half-mile race track at Lake Tetonka, bought some young horses and employed George Spear as trainer. Again a crisis was looming in our career. Should we abandon the opera business and go into the game of breeding race horses? A deep-seated love of the musical profession decided the question that fall and we organized a company and equipped for one opera - "Falke." For a brief time we played one-night stands. But railroad fares for an entire opera company proved too heavy and we again expanded into repertoire. We also decided to extend our territory to include the Pacific coast. After a four weeks' engagement at Minneapolis and one week at Duluth, we started on our western tour, in the dead of winter, with the temperature running 30 to 40 below zero. Business was good, our company was satisfactory and we were quite happy in the belief that added prestige and success awaited us on the long sunset trail. But Fate had planned otherwise. The northern roads had adopted a rule of running only passenger cars with paper wheels in winter trains because of this we left our private car at Mankato and started west over the Northern Pacific with a special train composed of baggage car, Pullman sleeper and locomotive. Our next stop was to be Grand Forks, N. D. In the middle of the night, seven miles from Brainerd, Minn., the train struck a rail that had cracked from extreme cold. The locomotive passed over it safely, taking the baggage car.

The Pullman sleeper, containing a slumbering opera company, left the track and rolled down an embankment. It was a wooden car, heated by a system known as the Baker hot water heater, as most Pullmans were in those days. The car caught fire almost immediately. An attack of gripe had put me out of the show and I was sleeping in a lower berth with my little daughter, Beale, Norm Wilkinson, my wife, and her maid, Lillie Wallace, were in the upper berth. The car crashed upon a telegraph pole about half down the embankment, the pole hitting our section. Nan Wilkinson and the maid were killed. The double windows were broken and I managed to get free with the baby, wrapped in blankets. Practically all of the company were injured in one way or another, mostly by crawling out through broken, jagged glass. By the time that those living were rescued, the flames had burned the telegraph pole off and a quarter of a mile distant a crew came to help us. In our night clothes, we took shelter in the baggage car, where a crate of costumes was opened to meet the emergency. It proved to contain the costumes for "Mikado." It was a costly looking company, far from "the flowers that bloom in the spring," that trooped into the Brainerd hotel about daybreak. Pauline Hall, whose opera company was playing at Minneapolis that night, wired me to ask if we needed financial assistance, a kind thought that I shall always remember. By this wreck the Andrews Opera Company was again completely disorganized. We cancelled all our dates. George and I, taking little Beale and other members of the family, went back to our Lake Tetonka stock farm. (To be continued)

Medford Gleemen Open Season at Klamath Monday

By Arthur W. Warnock Tomorrow evening the Medford Gleemen will open their fall season with a concert in the Pelican theater, Klamath Falls. Last February the Gleemen sang to a packed theater in Klamath and indications are that Monday's house will be a repeat performance as to attendance. It could not possibly excel the first concert as to audience appreciation. Here is the choir's program which will be directed by James Stevens with Sebastian Apollo as accompanist:

Following the concert the men will dine before leaving Klamath for return to Medford. A number of Medford people will also make the trip in private cars.

H. J. Fleischer, director of the campaign for the sale of associate membership for the Gleemen, for their two Medford concerts, this season, says that the coming week, which is the last week of the drive, will be the real effort of himself and assistants. Mr. Fleischer suggests to all music lovers in the county who want to support the Gleemen in their civic work for the community, that if they are not approached by one of his men to sign up, they will drop in to any Medford music store and get their membership tickets there. "Now is the time we want your aid," said Mr. Fleischer last night, "and before the week is over we are all hoping that you, and you, and especially YOU, will be enrolled under the Gleemen banner."

Ministers Meet Monday The Rogue River Ministerial association will have its monthly meeting on Monday at Rev. D. E. Millard's cabin on Rogue river. All members will bring a covered dish and venison is promised by the sportsman host. Morning devotions will be led by Rev. Merle Edwards of Ashland, and afternoon devotions by Rev. White of Talent. Dr. Kabele of the Medford Lutheran church, has prepared an interesting paper on "The Christian Home." All ministers and their wives of the Rogue River valley most cordially invited.
