Three Washington 'Fates' Stir Pot And Dictate 'Who's Who' Socially

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The three anonymous fates who set the Washington social pudding each year have done their baking and the pudding is ready to serve. Each fall three of the most prominent women in the capital are called into secret session and asked to determine from their knowledge who "rates" and who doesn't. Their decisions go into the "Social List of Washington, D. C.," edited by Helen Ray Hagner for years a well known social secretary and dictator here. The names of the three women are kept secret in case poisoned arrows fill the air of the drawing rooms after the list is issued.

They are faced with a social situation which is unique because the capital's society changes so constantly, and because so many social lights from other cities choose to illuminate the Washington scene at irregular intervals. This year there have been added the names of three members of the president's family: Mrs. Anna Dall, his daughter, who is now living at the White House, and Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, and his wife, who have recently taken a home near the city.

"Mrs. Dall, social dictator as pastured the word to social climbers, 'should now be called on. She is in residence.' Last year she was only a guest."

Whether Mrs. Dall will enjoy the situation is beside the point. The White House is open to anyone who wishes to call and leave cards.

Princess Cantacuzene will be in the book this year. Her arrival here has always sent delightful shivers up and down the capitals' social spine. Her title of "Princess" lends an authentic note to a social affair, and then, she is the granddaughter of President Grant. But the princess will be listed as plain "Mrs. Julia Grant."

She recently took out her American citizenship papers, and has gone to Florida to obtain a divorce. Her husband has announced.

Lives On A Boat There is some trouble about James A. Moffett, who directs the "new deal" housing corporation. His eligibility for the Washington social list is unquestioned since he already is persona-very-much-grata in New York drawing rooms. Besides, he has a very personable and marriageable daughter, Adelaide. But he persists in living on a boat, and so has no address. He will not be included in the list.

"Miss" Into "Mrs." Then there are the debs who have dropped "Miss" for "Mrs." since last winter. Their names must be changed. Outstanding among them is Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, III, the former Laura Barkley, daughter of Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky. Her young husband is a nephew of Chief of Staff Gen. Douglas MacArthur of the army, and as such very much of the inner circle.

Prof. A. B. Sperry, head of the geology department of Kansas State College, warned farmers normal ground water conditions following the drought might not return for 3 years.

With half the Texas prison system's 1934 cotton crop sold, proceeds promised to exceed 1933 returns despite drought and reduced acreage.

Plans have been laid to start the interior department's wind erosion control project on 10,000 acres near Dalhart, Tex.

It's not enough, apparently, to be wealthy or prominent to be a social light in Washington, D. C. You have to have an "address," too. So say the "three anonymous fates" of the capital who draw up the "social list" each season. This year have been added the names of three members of the president's family, Mrs. Anna Dall (left), who is living at the White House, and Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt (center), who live near the city. Another of the new list is Princess Cantacuzene (right), but you'll find her listed as Mrs. Julia Grant. She's a granddaughter of the post-Civil war president.

The heat wave of June, July and August was the direct cause of 306 deaths in Kansas, the secretary of the state board of health reported.
