Ye Smudge Pot

The political welkin is ringing with the allegation: "A Vote for Zimmerman is a Vote for Dunne," or "A Vote for Zimmerman is a Vote for Martin." This irks the Zimmerman adherents. They should retort: "A Vote for Zimmerman is a Vote for Zimmerman, unless there is monkey-business in the counting."

It would probably be unconstitutional, but instead of giving all persons over 60 years of age $200 per month, give them a slot machine, with sole rights to the profits. This would revive silver mining, as the gambling contraptions, now devour nickels faster than the minas can make them. The pensioner would still be required to spend the $200 in 30 days. When he discovered he was not going to be extravagant enough, he could play his own machine, and go broke for three (3) months in advance, in half a day.

The A. Moore Hamilton kid in-crued in his first all-night cry on the 20th inst. His father states he sounds like a Democratic orator, and just as tiresome.

Mid-West drouth victims are pouring through to California brisly, but the fair minded, concenat of opinion holds that in the majority of cases, the drouth was ably assiated by some bum personal head-work.

The Administration this week distributed $135,000,000 for relief during November. All the states of the Union, save Maine, received a slice of the federal money. Maine, with much rejoicing, in September, voted for Democratic candidates and Santa Claus, as Maine goes, so the rest of the country will eat.

A hunter showed up yesterday with the all-feathers of a mallard, instead of the horns of a deer. Both are interesting trophies of the chase, but contain no journalistic nourishment.

The Brat Bolsheviks, of which every campus seems to have a few, have burst forth at the University of California at Los Angeles. They are a type bred by the depression, and suffering from a delusion they are Communists. Nobody blames a citizen, who through no fault of his own, has been entrined by capitalistic greed through the years, from harboring Communist thoughts. It is different with a smart-sleek youth, who desires to tear the established form of government apart the first time he gets 100 miles from home, and feels he is abused because the mail failed to bring a letter from his girl for two whole days. It was the intention of the taxpayers, when they punlied up the money for the schools of higher education, and their parents, when they made sacrifices to send them there, that they acquire knowledge, and not spend their time thinking up ways to raise fancy hell. The nation can get its quota of half-baked agitators without sending them to college. It used to be a custom "Out Oregon" to speak upstarts who violated traditions, but was abolished as "undignified." It should be revived. It might not do the Campus Communists any good, but it most certainly would not do them any harm.

Dunne and a Sales Tax

ONE of Medford's leading Republicans who is supporting Joe Dunne for Governor is also supporting the 20-mill tax limitation measure.

In explaining his support of the latter measure, the gentleman in question stated: "I believe this the only way to reduce taxes and secure the sales tax. It must be done. There is no other way. If taxes are cut FIRST, the next session of the legislature will be faced by the necessity of raising revenue to keep our schools open, and our county governments functioning. There will be nothing to do but pass another sales tax. So I am going to vote for the 20 mill tax limitation."

But he is also going to vote for a Governor who has repeatedly stated that if the legislature passes another sales tax HE WILL VETO IT!

We agree the next legislature might try to pass a sales tax, for the third time, if this tax limitation measure should carry. But to pass such a tax over a Governor's veto, simply can't be done. In view of the deep seated prejudice against such a tax in this state, it would be hard enough to pass such a tax without a veto. With a veto, the measure would never be reported out.

So where would our friend be then? Certainly out on a limb. He would have a lower tax levy, but he would have no schools, he would have no court house, he would probably have no fire or police protection—certainly nothing adequate along this line. The ship of state would be wrecked without a life line.

Mr. Dunne is the only gubernatorial candidate pledged to veto a sales tax, if the representatives of the people should again decide such a tax is the only hope of having the state from disaster.

Certainly anyone who feels about the tax situation and the sales tax as the aforementioned citizen is, in voting for Joe Dunne, throwing away his vote for tax reduction through a sales tax.

"Save Our Schools"

THIS paper's opposition to the 20-mill limitation measure, is based upon its conviction that this is attacking the tax problem from the wrong angle. It is putting the cart before the horse. It is burning down the barn to get rid of the rats.

We don't deny for a moment, that property taxes MUST, in some way be reduced. But we DO deny that the state must be wrecked first to convince the people that this is the fact. Conditions are bad but we can't believe they are as bad as that.

The sane and sensible way to solve this taxation crisis, is to in some fashion provide revenue to relieve the property tax, BEFORE we arbitrarily reduce it, rather than AFTER.

This is particularly true in view of the wide spread popular prejudice against any form of sales tax. It seems to us the height of folly to place this state in a position where ONLY a sales tax can save it; without having stronger assurance than can now be obtained, that even in such an emergency, a sales tax can EVER be passed!

Think It Over

THE Roosevelt honeymoon has long since passed. The unanimity of support the president once enjoyed, long ago departed. An "off year" campaign is on, and for many weeks now the administration and the New Deal have been subjected to a withering fire from the opposition.

The day after election, the people of this country will scan their papers eagerly to see how the various states voted. Did they vote for or against Roosevelt, did they vote to give or not give the president a chance to carry out his New Deal program?

How do you want Oregon to be classified Mr. and Mrs. Voter? How do you wish to be classified yourself? For or against Roosevelt and the principles he represents?

Think that over before you mark your ballot next Tuesday. The eyes of the nation will be on Oregon on the 6th of November. And the result in the governorship race will be taken as the criterion.

GENERAL Martin is not only a close personal friend of the president's, but as congressman took an active part in the formation of his policies. The general has made the New Deal the chief plank in his platform, willing to stand or fall, on that issue, and that issue alone.

Where Joe Dunne stands on the New Deal no one knows, not even himself. But make no mistake about THIS:

IF JOE DUNNE IS ELECTED, IT WILL BE BROADCAST, FAR AND WIDE, BY EVERY REACTIONARY POLITICIAN AND INTEREST IN THE LAND, AS A BODY BLOW FOR THE PRESIDENT AND THE NEW DEAL. Oregon will be placed irrevocably in the anti-Roosevelt column. President Roosevelt will conclude he can no longer count on the whole-hearted support of the people of this state.

Is that what you want? If it is, vote for Joe Dunne. If it ISN'T, vote for Congressman Martin.

This isn't the most important issue in the campaign. The most important issue is the fitness of the candidate for the job. But this question of supporting or repudiating the Roosevelt administration, certainly deserves careful consideration.

A vote for Martin not only means a vote for the man BEST QUALIFIED to be Governor, but it means a vote to uphold the hands of President Roosevelt as he reaches the critical half-way mark in his administration.

long-term government obligations if offered in small denominations. The amount involved was not large, but it strengthened the private beliefs of treasury powers that they have found a new government bond market. That may be an overly optimistic view, but they have it. DON'T be surprised if they break out sometime soon with a similar issue of recovery bonds to finance at least a portion of relief expenditures. At least that is what they now have in the backs of their minds.

CALCIUM LACTATE AND SO FORTH FOR HAY FEVER AND ASTHMA.

Whenever I sustain a particularly hard crack I look up at the portrait of the beloved T. R. and pretty soon I'm ready to go to fight back. Whenever I get a testimonial I look at another portrait over my work bench and wonder. This one is John J. Coincidence. John's only comment is generally something akin to a Bronx cheer.

A testimonial really isn't worth a hoot so far as proving anything is concerned. But I'm printing this one today for a purpose. I hope to get the attention of many readers who have taken calcium lactate for one thing or another, and I hope they will tell me what their experience with the medicine has been.

In the course of the years I have suggested this harmless remedy for all sorts of troubles, as it might seem to the uninitiated, but always there has been reason behind it. Some of the conditions are hyperesthetic rhinitis—that's really a highbrow and exclusive malady, you common folk need not bother about it—asthma, hay fever, migraine, hives, angioneurotic edema—that's another rather swanky complaint which, in ordinary language, is known as giant hives. Then I blush to find from flipping over the files, that I have recommended calcium lactate for food sensitization and even for rheumatism. That is, of course I didn't suggest it for rheumatism myself, for if I did some bright reader might immediately ask how come I admit there is such a thing as rheumatism. I just quoted a report of a physician in Germany who praised calcium lactate as fine for neuritis, neuralgia, rheumatism 'n' everything.

The testimonial comes from a woman reader: "Wrote several months ago and told you I was treating my husband for what physicians called hay fever and asthma, with cod liver oil, iodine and calcium lactate. I have kept this treatment up nearly two years now. Where he used to have an attack every week, lasting for three or four days, the interval stretched out to two weeks and then a month, with the attacks lasting only a day. Now I begin to hope he is cured, for it is nearly three months since his last attack and that was a very light one."

That reminds me, I have suggested that the assimilation of calcium is promoted by a daily ration of cod liver oil, oh, say, a tablespoonful daily, and also by daily exposure of the naked skin to sunlight. So far all scientific observation supports me. But now it is just my notion, for which I have no scientific support, that a suitable iodine ration also promotes the utilization of the calcium, and for a child or an adult a suitable iodine ration, still, in my opinion merely, is one drop of tincture of iodine in a drink of water for a month in each of the four seasons of the year—say the months of November, February, May and August. Or if you prefer take a drop twice a week the year around.

We are only just beginning to learn about the metabolism of calcium. There is considerable evidence that ductless glands, particularly the parathyroid gland, control or regulate the calcium metabolism, and there is also some evidence that certain vitamins in turn influence the functional activity of ductless glands. It is all pretty complicated, and if I were you I'd just take the calcium lactate for a while and get plenty of sunshine and greens—and fresh vegetables and see what comes of it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Stunned. When I saw an automobile hit a pedestrian I was so stunned and shocked I didn't know what to do for the victim. Please tell me just how to act in such emergencies, or direct me to a source. (H. N.)

Answer—Take a course of instruction in first aid in one of the series given periodically by local chapters of the Red Cross. Or apply to the public library for books on first aid and read the general instructions.

Queer Drug Store. When I tried to get the vitamin and mineral preparation you recommended, our druggist said he had it but it was just a passing fad and he could not sell it to me. (Mrs. I. P.)

Answer—There are queer folks in all trades. Some druggists do not keep things their customers want. Others do not sell them. This preparation, being a food, is harmless.

Varicose Vein. Sore leg, one of the big blood veins burst 14 years ago before my first son was born. The leg is not open but a dark blue place causes constant pain, and the pain increases when I am on my feet long. (Mrs. L. A. H.)

Answer—When patients say the vein "bursts" they mean it became dilated, enlarged, not that there was a rupture and bleeding. That never happens. When they say the leg is not "open" they mean there is no raw surface, no ulcer. Ulcer is common as a consequence of varicose vein. The remedy in such a case is obliteration of the vein by chemical injection which any good doctor can do. In any case of varicose vein, with or without varicose ulcer, the patient should endeavor to lie down for a minute every hour and raise the legs to vertical and gently exercise toes and feet as the juggling an imaginary balloon.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Harold Vanderbilt, perhaps the most colorful figure of his generation, fits the hackneyed term "rich sportsman."

Yet is far from the idler type associated with such description. Since graduation from Harvard, he has been active in the railroad business.

While yachting is his favorite relaxation, he is an exceptional golfer, first rate at handball and a splendid horseman. He lives with no display in a residential mid-town hotel most of the time and maintains regular hours at his office.

To his intimates he is "Mike," and although the nickname might be taken easy familiarly, he has an outward shell not easily broken. He has the dignity befitting those born to the purple. His speech is precise and the diction the sort that makes him a delight for the news reels.

In his early 30's, he has cruised the seven seas and was the commander of a submarine chaser off the Irish coast during the war. Outside of appearance at suspicious sporting events, he is seldom seen in public. His theatrical attendance is confined to neighborhood movies.

The youngest wearer of a vandyke is the globe-trotting John W. Vandercock, Jr. And at 32, he is likely America's most widely traveled writer. His preferences are for the wild places of the earth—the jungles of Dutch Guiana, Borneo and expeditions to Liberia and the Cameron plateau. He has authored four books on these treks. Young Vandercock comes from a literary family. His father was a celebrated editor and first to discover the talents of Roy W. Howard in the middle east and Brazil; also to New York. His mother is also author of several books.

Likely the most prolific of America's literary families is "the writing Terhunes." This includes the celebrated Albert "Jayson Terhune, whose mother was "Marion Harland" and whose wife, Anne Terhune, is known as the author of many books. Terhune's nephew is Frederic Van de Water, an author of prominence, and his sister, Virginia Van de Water, Frederic's mother, has long serialized for the newspapers and magazines. And more remarkable still, there is no jealousy among them.

From 636 wharves two companies operating off the coast of Alaska derived more than 28,000 barrels of oil and 2000 tons of by-products this season.

A survey of several widely scattered Kansas counties showed about half would assess higher and the remainder lower, taxes against residents this year.

Ye Poet's Corner

LOVE'S DESTINY

Live on, brave knight, live on! And keep thy heart fires burning. For love hath ever held away, When lived in true heart yearning.

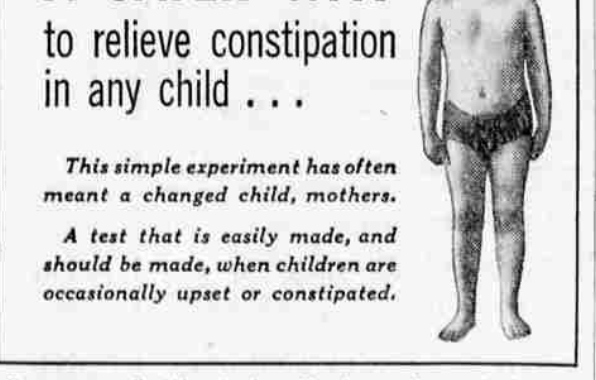

What matter if thy barque should drift Across a seeming gulf—deep and wide? There is no depth, nor height, can hold Love's spirit, ever from thy side.

Even as water finds its downward way Through chaams deep, or rocky gorge; So love, with true hearts will find a way To weld her circle in love's forge

Yet, wilt thou find the hidden way, Where true hearts part and meet again. So let love fires purge thy very soul, Until the ways of destiny may explain. —By Mary O. Carey.

A SAFER WAY to relieve constipation in any child . . .

Doctors urge a liquid laxative for children. The child who has been constipated in a hospital, will usually come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch. Hospitals give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount. Children should never be given the strong cathartics that are meant for adult use. So, avoid all use of mineral drugs, whether they are salts, pills, tablets, or "candy" form. Even once a month is too often to give any child a cathartic containing powerful drugs.

The Proper Treatment

Give that sluggish child a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative), California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not upset them.

Just give any headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help. When you change to California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you'll risk no more violence to your child's appetite.

THE "LIQUID TEST"

This is the way to relieve occasional sluggishness, or constipation in a child of any age. First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age, and condition. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is California Syrup of Figs which every druggist keeps in stock. Be certain that it is the genuine product, with "California" blown in the bottle.
