

PETE ZIMMERMAN RUNS SECOND AND JOE DUNNE THIRD

for the opening of the 1933 legislature, which likewise will see the greatest democratic strength the state's minority party has seen in years.

Dunne Runs Third Peter Zimmerman, who carried the counties of Clackamas, Columbia, Marion, Sherman, Washington and Yamhill, passed the republican and increased this lead as upstate returns were reported. Joe E. Dunne was third in the contest, leading to date in Benton, Douglas, Grant, Klamath, Morrow, Wallowa and Wheeler. All other counties went to the victor.

Republicans were cheered by the race made by Earl Snell, Arlington, secretary of state, who received the highest vote cast for office at the election, with three opponents against him. He was leading in all but two counties—Lake and Union, and was increasing his 28,000 jump over H. E. Walter, democrat, as returns continued.

Howard, Grand Sale There was no question after substantial votes were reported that Charles A. Howard and Charles Gram, republicans, would be re-elected to the office they now hold—superintendent of public instruction and labor commissioner, respectively. Howard was leading J. W. Leonard by more than 20,000 votes while Gram was increasing his 13,000 advantage over his democratic opponent, Walfred Shubolin.

Negative votes on the three measures on the ballot continued to pile up as returns were being completed, the most decisive defeat being handed the proposal to amend the constitution relating to health care practice. The 20-mill tax limitation and the grange power bill were also laid away.
