Ye Poet's Corner FORGET ME NOT Dear little flower of sweetest hue, A thought of you our soul enchants.

Dear little flower of sweetest hue, A thought of you our soul enchants. We would not at this time forget The boys in far off France.

Your face brings back a memory Of dark, dark, days that came and fled. And we pause a moment in reverent For loved ones long since dead.

Well do we remember sweethearts That parted on that day; Of sorrows, tears most bitter, That was paid in the battle fray.

You tell of broken-hearted mothers, Who gave their pride and joy To yonder Flanders Field, Where she gave her only boy.

Dear Forget-Me-Not, you tell of husbands, Noble, true and grand, Who went to fight for dear ones, And died in a far-off land.

No one to stanch the crimson, No hand to wipe the fevered brow, Perhaps not a word from the home-land; No, we'll not forget you now.

Dear Forget-Me-Not, you tell of children, Longing for a glimpse of Daddy's face, Who in his far-off mission, Was filling a warrior's place.

You tell of empty chairs, Of mothers old and grey, Whose face might still be smiling, Were it not for that fatal day.

Yes, we'll wear you, dear Forget-Me-Not, Let in this fleeting time We for a moment might forget The boys in that far-off clime.
