GEO. A. HUNT OPENS NEW MOVIE SEASON

Believed to be the finest lineup of feature attractions ever offered to the public, have been contracted for use during the coming year at the Craterian and Rialto theatres, according to an announcement made by George A. Hunt yesterday.

"Never, in all my years of motion picture exhibition," said Mr. Hunt, "have we had such a stellar array of combined star and story entertainment, backed by real direction and production."

"For years, every theatre manager in the country has balked at some of the film product he has been necessitated to run," Mr. Hunt continued, "and now it begins to look as though it has finally brought a result. I have never seen such an imposing group of star material in stories that will bring out their greatest talents, as in the pictures now set for production. Not only are the producers becoming more 'choosy' in their combinations of story and star material, but they have come to the realization that 'clean pictures,' suitable for the entire family, are the ones that they get the greatest returns. Consequently, I'm glad to say that the forthcoming year will see a return to more films of this type than it has been our pleasure to show prior to this time."

The entire output of leading studios, which include every star of any importance, have been contracted for. In addition to this, a selective deal has been made with the independent producing companies that will allow a choice selection of their best productions.

Pictures soon to be shown in Medford at either the Craterian or Rialto theatres include "The Gay Divorcee," featuring the stars of "Flying Down to Rio"—Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers—in the screen version of the famous musical comedy sensation; Claudette Colbert in Cecil B. DeMille's newest extravaganza, "Cleopatra," with Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon in supporting roles as Caesar and Marc Anthony; three Motion Picture Academy Award winners, Norma Shearer, Charles Laughton and Fredric March in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"; Helen Hayes in "What Every Woman Knows," the play she made famous on the stage; Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald in the Ernst Lubitsch production of Franz Lenau's immortal "Metropolitan"; Grace Moore, famous operatic star, in "One Night of Love," which has been shattering box office records all over the country; Joe E. Brown in "The Day After Tomorrow"; John Boles and Irene Dunne, together for the first time since "Back Street" in "The Age of Innocence"; Wheeler and Woolsey in their new musical comedy, "Kentucky Kernele"; Leo Tracy as the "Lemon Drop Kid," from the story of the same name by Damon Runyon; Leslie Howard and Kay Francis in the much discussed "British Agent"; Ann Harding's new film, "The Puntliner," one of the best-sellers in fiction; "Anne of Green Gables," the famous story by L. M. Montgomery.

Expected to Arrive—Mrs. Elden Galt, and children, Bunny Bea and Douglas, were expected to arrive yesterday from Madera, Cal., where they have been spending the summer. They will make their home in this city with Mrs. G. E. Neely.
